Why is Rollup Chosen Over Any Other Awning System Time After Time?

FOR IT'S QUALITY EXCLUSIVE FEATURES...

1 CONCEALED AWNING SYSTEM®

Exclusive Fully Enclosed Tubular Housing encases your awning in the rolled-in closed position. Protects the fabric and mechanisms from weather, dirt & mildew.

5 FRONT BAR

Seals the housing, arm and fabric when your awning is rolled up. A color coordinated strip enhances your front bar. The decorative scallop is easily removed for off-season storage.

2 CHAINLINK WINDFLEX ARM®

Engineered to flex with the wind absorbing shock and keeping constant tension on the fabric. No cables to stretch, fray or break.

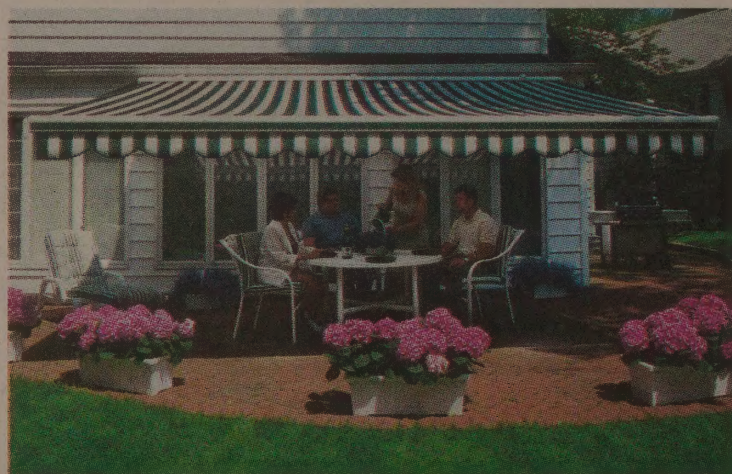

3 ADJUSTABLE PITCH

A specially designed C-collar bracket allows for adjustment of pitch up to 180 degrees.

4 WIPERBAR

Automatically wipes away excess water, twigs, leaves and dirt when retracting your awning.

No Poles or Supports Required.

6 FABRIC

The largest collection of the Best European Designer Fabrics. Backed by Rollup Awning's Industry-Setting non pro-rated 10-YEAR FABRIC WARRANTY.

7 FREE IN-HOME ESTIMATES

Let us bring a showroom to you, in the comfort of your home. One of our experts can help you select the best size, location, and fabric for your awning.

8 SHOWROOM

Rollup has the largest indoor & outdoor showrooms on Long Island. Creating the perfect setting to help you see how a Rollup Awning would look on your home.

9 DELIVERY

Rollup has the fastest possible delivery and installation time because we build all of our Rollup Awnings in our manufacturing facility in Holbrook. We are not a dealer or distributor for out of state manufacturers.

Rose Jewelers Restyling Event. Friday, April 30, in Patchogue. Saturday, May 1, in Southampton.

We've assembled a designer showcase selection of over 1,000 platinum and 18K gold finished items and semimounts. Select from a treasure of certified diamonds and colored gemstones. At the Creation Station, an award-winning jewelry designer will help you turn your own loose diamonds and precious gemstones, or your newly purchased selection, into a one-of-a-kind work of art. Or, he'll redesign an existing piece into a totally new one — while you wait and watch.

Find Out About Every Fundraiser and Gala in the Hamptons Online

by Dan Rattiner

Sometime this spring people will receive in the mail an invitation to a gala in a small town in New Jersey for a worthy cause. It will go like this:

The Gala will take place June 12 from 5 to 7 p.m.

It will be a dinner.

Tickets will be $1,500 a couple.

The money will go to a worthy cause. (They will name it.)

But you don't have to go anywhere.

On the night of the gala, a man in a tuxedo will appear at your front door with a fine gourmet dinner for two in a box. Heat and eat. Please check below for chicken or fish.

You will also receive a 10-minute video about the good works done by the charity.

Honorees for the event are to be so-and-so and so-and-so. A celebrity will make opening remarks. (See the video.) The engraved award to the two honorees will be presented by the honorary presenter, another so-and-so, who was last year's honoree.

Please watch the video while you eat the dinner.

Dress informally or, well, wear whatever.

Well, that is a pretty imaginative way of the dry cleaners, and they are checking their mailboxes for the imaginative and interesting invitations that they will soon be receiving.

They are also checking their bank accounts, getting on the Stairmaster and bringing in the personal trainer, so they can get ready for what is surely an athletic event that nobody in his right mind would have thought about in the Hamptons fifty years ago: the vigorous attending, in relay fashion, of about sixty galas and fundraisers for worthy causes during the fifteen weeks of the summer season between Memorial Day and Labor Day. The galas keep you in shape, if you stay away from the hors d'oeuvres.

Practically all the galas and fundraisers take place on a

Saturday night because everybody needs Friday to get out here, get organized and because on Sunday, in the afternoon anyway, everybody goes back to Manhattan. Do the math. That's about four galas every Saturday doing things. Unfortunately, so far anyway, this kind of fundraising solution has yet to make it out to the Hamptons. And so, instead, the well-to-do of the East End are, as you read this, taking their tuxedos and formal dresses out of the mothballs and sending them off to

Morning At Dan's Papers And The Communications Devices Go Berserk

By Dan Rattiner

Here is how I spent my morning. I went to the beach around 8:30 and on a very old laptop computer, wrote one of my stories for the paper. It was a very sunny day. I sat in a folding chair. I use this very old laptop because, at the time that it was made, they had not yet figured out how to backlight a computer screen, and so I can read it in bright sunlight. I can't read on any of the new laptops on the beach. Backlit, full color laptops completely wash out in sunlight. All those ads showing people sitting around outdoors getting their email on WiFi are total baloney, unless they are sitting around with a laptop made before 1989.

Anyway, after I finished writing, which was around 10:30, I went to my office in Bridgehampton. My office has a filing cabinet, a desk, a phone, a chair, a state-of-the-art laptop, a fax machine, a printer, a palm pilot and a whole computer network that all of this is wired up to. I am engaged and connected.

I turned on the state-of-the-art laptop, clicked on the AOL icon, typed in my password and this man with a deep voice said WEL-

COME! It was my intention to see if I had gotten any new email. But there was a lot to look at on my main screen. There was the breaking news, a poll to take about Brad and Jen, a small, inch-square video from CNN that went on automatically for thirty seconds with an announcer talking in a very tinny voice about

SEND and got a message reading THE INTERNET IS NOT AVAILABLE AT THIS TIME. WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEND THIS LATER? I clicked YES.

AOL then made a cute, popping sound which is what it does to indicate that a new piece of mail had just come in. It was somebody sending me an offer for Norton software at 80% off. Incoming was using the Internet. Outgoing was not. Hmmm.

Next I tried emailing the story I wrote on the beach with my old laptop to the new laptop. This is standard procedure for me. I have an ancient Compuserve account on the old laptop. It's kind of hard wired to automatically send things to my AOL account and all I have to do is punch in the name of the story. It works, though nobody knows what the sequence is anymore.

To use it, I don't use the new DSL cable, of course, I use the phone line. Specifically, in my office, I use an extension of the phone line I use for the fax machine. It makes that screeching sound.

Anyway, I clipped in, dialed up, wrote out the

have to find an obsolete cable.
I think it's called an RS232.

a bubble gum-chewing woman in Tennessee who got in a car accident because she blew a giant bubble that wouldn't pop and couldn't see the road, a cow stranded in a flood in Iowa and an upcoming CNN special.

It was like a shopping bazaar. But I'm used to it. I waded through it all, clicked on my e-mail, opened a letter, wrote a reply, clicked on night, an Olympian task, the triathlon of raising money, impossible for most, who take the lesser two and send regrets or money, and who take the abbreviated version of the fundraising weekend and just attend the other two, have cocktails at one and dinner and speeches at the other. And that's Saturday night. Total cost for the summer, about fifty thousand dollars. The total for all charity goes for the summer is about ten million dollars. Which does a lot of good and which everybody is very glad of.

But do galas always have to look the same? The white party tent, the valets and security people, the welcoming committee and table with the little folding cards on it that tell you the table you have been assigned to, the decorations, the waiters and champagne, the bar, the band and the dinner, the celebrities. Then, after dinner, the speeches and the thank yous. I think it is fair to say everybody loves the mingling that goes on, the seeing of people you haven't seen in a long time, the networking, the cards exchanged and Monday "I'll call you." But then, there is the same silent auction at every fundraiser, the raffle first prize on display (a new car or a trip to Mustique), the tables of gifts and prizes, the party bag to take home at the end.

I have a suggestion. And a plan.

The suggestion is that a summit be held in early May among the committee chairmen of all the charity parties at which time a wide variety of entertainments will be decided upon. The one from New Jersey is a start. Maybe one fundraiser features a Russian tumbling act. Another has sumo wrestlers. Another has giant fairies on stilts. Another has the New York Philharmonic playing the 1812 Overture with fireworks and a cannon. If we all have to go to these experiences, let's vary them. A Guinness Book of World record attempt here. A parade of Sports Illustrated bathing beauties there. This could be a dazzling summer. Do they really all have to look the same?

And here's our plan.

Dan's Papers is going to open something we call THE REGISTRY. It will be online at our website, at danspapers.com. And you can go there to learn which galas and fundraisers are on which dates.

But there is more to it than just that. How often has it happened that one major charity holds a fundraiser on the same day as another very similar charity? Of course if they all have to be on Saturday this seems inevitable, but there are advantages to knowing when the big ones are and when the small, scratchy ones are. Furthermore, it is possible to have a gala on Friday night, and it is possible to have one for Sunday brunch.

As things stand now, without a central registry, nobody knows WHEN a particular gala or fundraiser takes place until they get an invitation. And then, if there is a conflict, it is too late to do anything about it. In other file name of my story and pressed send. After a while, my old laptop gave me a message. NO DIALTONE, it read.

I checked all the connections. The phone cords were in tight. Maybe some sand had gotten into my modem. It could happen. I unclipped the phone cord and blew into the slot in the modem and put the phone cord back. NO DIALTONE.

At this point, AOL made the cute popping sound again, indicating I had another piece of incoming mail. This message was telling me someone had been trying to fax me something, but it wouldn't go through. I did not know who this person was, and there was no phone number, but there was an email address. A lot of good that would do me, either on the old laptop or the new laptop; neither could send at this point.

I called downstairs on the telephone to the office manager and asked if anybody else was having trouble sending email. Nobody was. Next, I went to the fax machine to check the phone line there. The fax machine was out of paper. Well, that wasn't helping. I filled it. I pressed START. Nothing happened. So I read the little message in the readout. CHANGE CARTRIDGE, it read. I called downstairs and asked if they had a replacement cartridge and they said that they didn't but would run up to the mall and get one.

You know, with all this twenty-first century stuff, you have to have a back-up plan. While I was waiting for the new cartridge, I decided to implement back up plan A for getting my story over to my state-of-the-art laptop. It's a complex bit of procedure. On my old laptop, I plug in to something called a Backpack external drive — another old device — which I keep in a drawer, and I copy the file to a diskette that goes in the Backpack. Then I take the diskette out of the Backpack and physically put it into the A drive of the state-of-the-art computer and transfer it that way. And if THAT doesn't work, I can walk the diskette down to the editorial room, which is plan B.

Anyway, for some reason, the Backpack could not get itself acknowledged by the old laptop. A message on the old laptop screen read NO EXTERNAL DRIVE FOUND. I couldn't figure it out, at first. Then I found it wasn't turned on. But when I turned it on, it still wouldn't work.

Then I found it wasn't plugged into the wall all the way.

I was fiddling with the plug on the floor when my cell phone rang. Where was my cell phone? I could hear it ringing. I finally found it in the inside pocket of my shoulder bag, but by the time I got to it, it had defaulted to 1 MISSED CALL. I went to MISSED CALLS and got the number and called it. It was a friend I know who asked if I was having trouble sending files on my AOL. I told him I was.

Me too, he said. I think something is wrong with AOL. I hope it comes up soon. I'm receiving, but not sending.

I'm receiving too, I told him.

They usually get this sort of thing cleared up pretty quickly, he said.

At that point, my cell phone made a beep, the kind it makes when it is low on battery. I told him I had to go, that my cell phone was dying, that I would call back later.

But then, my mother called. Through the warning beeps, she told me she had taken the plunge, had just bought herself a cell phone and I could call her. But when I asked her what the number was, she said she hadn't written it down and couldn't remember it, but I should have it on RECEIVED CALLS.

You're right, I said. I forgot about that.

I can't hear you, she said. You're breaking up. I'm in Boca. Call me back later.

The Backpack really wasn't working. It's supposed to be the F drive, but now the old laptop kept sending me a message that read CAN'T RECOGNIZE F DRIVE. Maybe it was the diskette. These are old diskettes. Haven't bought new ones in maybe a year. I went rummaging around for another one. It read CORRESPONDENCE 1996 in magic marker on it. It too wouldn't work in the Backpack, so I took it out and put it into the state-of-the-art laptop and it worked just fine. I had this long list of every letter I had written in 1996. There was

War

East Hampton Vs. Southold And Water Mill Vs. Bridgehampton

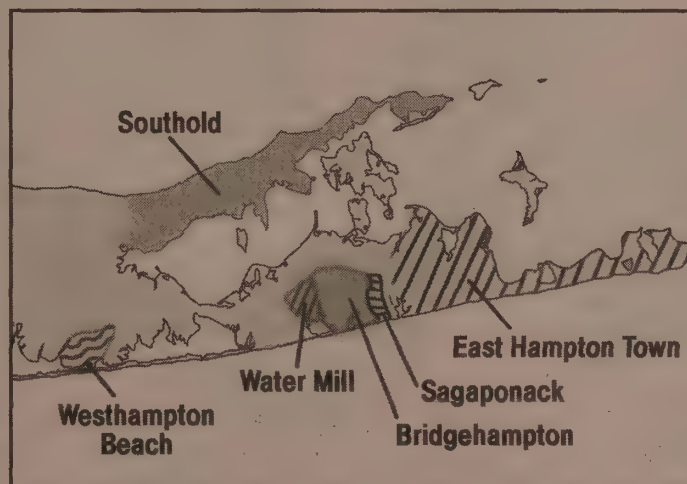

By Dan Rattiner

Water Mill is mad at Bridgehampton. Southold is mad at East Hampton. And the residents of Clearwater Beach in Springs are fighting with the Lions Head residents over who is to get some spoils — the left over mountain of sand and sludge from some County dredging. It's unusual for sections of the Hamptons to be squabbling like this. Usually, everything out here is peaceful and serene, a lovely quiet place where people come to lie down in a hammock and nap away their tensions.

Water Mill residents are angry — outraged, is how they put it — that the residents of adjacent Bridgehampton are proposing to incorporate themselves as a village, the border of which will hijack what they say is a good hunk of Water Mill. In fact, according to the Water Mill Citizens Advisory Council, Bridgehampton is attempting to seize approximately one third of the entire eastern part of Water Mill.

"This is an arrogant attempt to expropriate what has been officially deemed Water Mill property," the CAC wrote to the

caption-caption

Indeed, in making the proposal for the establishment of a new village in Bridgehampton, Fred Camman, the leader of the effort, freely acknowledged that the proposed boundary lines lop off part of Water Mill. What he did in his proposal, he said, was follow the existing lines of the Bridgehampton School district to the east toward Sagaponack, but then follow the existing lines of the Bridgehampton Fire District to the west toward Water Mill. The old school district lines in the west, he said, were made years ago in an age of gerrymandering.

If Bridgehampton prevails, specifically lost to Water Mill will be Snake Hollow Road, much of what today is known as Hayground, and the Bridgehampton Commons.

"They don't call it the Water Mill Common," Camman noted.

Up in Southold, the people in charge there are outraged with the Town of East Hampton. In Southold, various ferries arrive and depart for such far away places as New London, Connecticut, Plum Island and Shelter Island. People coming down from Connecticut bound for East Hampton and the South Fork have, for years, taken a ferry to Southold's Orient Point, then driven to a nearby Ferry to go to the South Fork and East Hampton.

Southold has to clean up after these people words, the party planners are choosing their dates blindly.

Therefore, a secondary function of the Dan's Papers REGISTRY will be to help party planners decide on which dates to have their party. Dan's Papers has access to much of the information needed, six months in advance, and so, we will post it on the REGISTRY. But we will also invite all party planners to contribute new information for the REGISTRY. We can post dates as far as a year ahead. If everyone participates, we can make this a virtually complete calendar of the fundraising events of the summer on the East End.

And that's good for everybody. The REGISTRY will be free, searchable, interactive, and as complete as we can possibly make it. Look for it around May 15 online. Until then, you can send entries for us to post at theregistry@danspapers.com. We will retrieve mail daily. And we will put it on the site manually until we can open it up to the public.

Dan's Papers, at your service. We'll see you at the party, the one just before the Miss America pageant selection where they will have the dancing bears, the Twyla Tharp Dance Company and the Harlem Globetrotters doing a twenty minute routine together. • passing through. They litter, drive on the shoulders, cause potholes in the roads, honk their horns and are generally a big nuisance. But Southold puts up with it, because Southold understands that people have to get from place to place.

Earlier this month, East Hampton passed a local ordinance forbidding anybody to build and use any passenger ferry landing anywhere in the Town of East Hampton.

"The Town of East Hampton has attempted to insulate itself from the regional traffic that is bound specifically for the South Fork," Southold Supervisor Josh Horton wrote in a memo made public last week. "It attempts to shield itself from important federal, state, regional and local concerns."

Southold is threatening a lawsuit.

"We are confident that we will prevail," East Hampton Supervisor said. He added that Southold should keep out of East Hampton's business.

As for the big mound of spoil that the Army Corps of Engineers will dredge off the bottom of the Inlet to Hog Creek, the communities of Clearwater and Lion's Head are both laying claim to it, each stating that much of their beaches have been washed away, and the spoil, when packed on the beach, will restore their land to its former size.

The two communities will tussle over this until autumn, however, because until then, environmental concerns involving the safety of the piping plovers, shellfish, sea mammals and certain wetlands will prevent the dredging from taking place.

The amount of spoil, collected in one spot, would be enough to raise a small island in Gardiner's Bay, if anybody wanted to do that. East Hampton gets to make the final decision.

Perhaps they could offer that island to Southold as a peace offering. Ferries could stop there. Or maybe they could give the island to Water Mill to assuage them for what might be lost in a battle with Bridgehampton.

If none of that works, the spoil could be sold in bottles as "a piece of the Hamptons" over the Internet. Now you, too, can enjoy the peace and quiet of this tranquil place. Just dump the Hamptons out into a little bowl and add water. Then sit and close your eyes, take a deep breath, and imagine yourself in paradise...

Did somebody say the proposed village of Dunehampton is angry with the people proposing a Village in Sagaponack? Dunehampton would be split in two, they say. And if you look at a map, indeed it would.

And why is Westhampton Beach not taking any sides in all of this? •

A Search For Bad Guys From Ninjas To Nazis To Reds To Al Qaeda

1. Dracula 2. Jaws 3. Ninja 4. Jason 5. Chucky 6. Darth Vader 7. Pennywise 8. Dan 9. Scarface 10. The Joker 11. The Grinch 12. Colonel Klink

By Dan Rattiner

This article is about the search for villainy in American letters during the last fifteen years. It's an intimidating subject, I know, but trust me, you'll enjoy the search. As it turned out, the lack of villains threatened to put American mystery and adventure writers out of business for awhile.

The problems began when the Soviet Union collapsed, and with it, the classic villains of American letters, the Russians — grim, scheming Communists bent on world domination. Suddenly, villains could no longer be Russians, because the Russians were now our friends and willing to embrace western ways.

We wanted to help them. And so, beginning around 1991, about fifty thousand novelists, screenwriters and playwrights suddenly found themselves bereft of villainy. Worse, every international murder mystery they had written during the prior quarter of a century was now null and void. It was a crisis. And so the search began for a new type of villain.

One thought was to bring back the Nazis. There was little doubt that the Nazis created more evil in the world during their ten year reign than the Soviets did in the next twenty five.

But Nazis as villains had sort of come to an end around 1955 when the full nature of the Soviet menace confronted America.

If bringing back Nazis seemed too retro, there was also thinking that we could bring back the Japanese. But the Japanese had been almost gracious in defeat and by 1991 were considered among our most loyal friends. To bring back the cartoon image of an evil, buck-toothed, myopic and undersized Jap was totally out of the question. Political correctness was in full swing by 1991. And nobody wanted to hurt the feelings of the Japanese.

For the same reason, it was not possible to bring back the savage, scalping American

NO SOCIAL SECURITY NO DRIVER'S LICENSE - NUTS!

By Dan Rattiner

If you want to see a perfect example of how to pass a law without thinking it through, consider what has happened since Governor Pataki signed into law a bill making it impossible to get a driver's license unless you have a social security card, something which he did last month.

The impact of this here on the East End, of course, involves mostly the recently immigrated Hispanic people of this state, who are currently in the middle of various degrees of paperwork to become entitled to social security cards. This is a process which the families of many of us — for instance, the Patakis — have done in the past. Some get turned away. Some get to stay.

In any case, these people, also like the rest of us, have to eat. And so they have to work, which they do very well. And because, thanks to Governor Pataki, there is no sensible public transportation, they have cars, mostly old ones, to get around in.

Now, when they go to Motor Vehicle, to renew their driver's licenses they have to turn in their old ones. But they have to drive anyway. So they do and hope they don't get in an accident. Because without a social security card they can't get a driver's license and without a driver's license they can't register a car, and without registration they can't get insurance.

Also, because some of them are particularly law abiding citizens, they beg and plead and offer to pay people who have social security to have those people register cars for them. It's a whole new business on the East End. Registering someone else's car.

The Hispanic population now is greater than 15% of the population of the East End. To pass this law creates a real danger on the road, not only for them but for the rest of us and our children. How stupid.

Calverton Gambling

Riverhead and Shinnecocks Meet to Discuss Gambling At Grumman Site

By Anthony Vela

Ever since the Shinnecock Indian Nation last year was forced by a court ordered injunction to stop clearing land in Hampton Bays for a casino, residents and local politicians have voiced their opposition to having a casino on the South Fork. According to the Shinnecock Indian Nation, their economic self-reliance is the reason behind the casino.

Although the opposition is strong throughout the community, the Shinnecock Indian Nation may eventually build a casino in Hampton Bays. However, three things have to happen: first, they must get Federal recognition; second, the land used for the casino must be put in a trust by the Federal government; and third, they must enter into a "compact" with New York State, which regulates the casino.

Even with everything in place, the Shinnecock Indian Nation may still have a hard time with building a casino in a place where the community is against it. However, there may be another spot — the Calverton Enterprise Park in Riverhead. According to published reports, a meeting between two Riverhead town board members, the town's real estate broker, and Shinnecock tribal leaders took place late last month, though a reported proposal to use 600 acres for a casino, hotel, and convention center has yet to be officially made to the town of Riverhead by Shinnecock tribal leaders. If the deal goes through, the town of Riverhead could net close to $30 million and annual tax revenues that could go towards the school district, or whatever the town decides to spend it on. However, the state and county would also receive a cut, and depending on what that percentage is, the town could wind up not making as much as one might think.

Former Riverhead town supervisor Bob Kozakiewicz and Baiting Hollow real estate broker Bill Talmage spearheaded the possible purchase at the Calverton Enterprise Park. Mr. Talmage has said that it would be a "mistake" if the town of Riverhead did not at least give the casino a good look. He did say that it would be a boon to the local economy, not to mention the thousands of construction jobs and the 10,000 to 15,000 permanent jobs.

Although no polls have been taken by Riverhead residents it is possible that the Shinnecock Indian Nation will face similar opposition to what they face in Hampton Bays. A recent mail-in poll created by Assemblyman Fred W. Thiele Jr. shows that 80% of respondents in the Southampton area oppose a Hampton Bays casino. Mr. Thiele has publicly stated that he is against all casinos, whether in Hampton Bays or Niagara Falls. Richard Amper, executive director of the Long Island Pine Barrens Society, is also on the record saying he is against building a casino in Calverton.

Millions of people travel all over the United States to casinos every year to gamble, but a majority of these people would probably not want a casino in their own backyard. The argument against building casinos includes creating more community and social problems than they fix. However, because of the annual tax revenues, casinos can help communities lower their tax bills. If you have seen the movie Casino, by Martin Scorsese, you saw first hand the crime that was once associated with them in Las Vegas. Although casinos are now run by corporations, it is hard to get the image out of your mind.

WAINSCOTT HIT AND RUN TRIAL GOES TO THE JURY

By Robin F. Smith

The trial of Leslie Jennemann, who is charged with second-degree manslaughter, leaving the scene of an accident and tampering with physical evidence, in the hit and run of Henry Yarrell on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton in November 2002, is underway at the State Supreme Court in Riverhead.

Late last week and early this week, prosecutors were calling witnesses, including Greg Kotke, of Bridgehampton, who had, earlier on the evening in question, met Jennemann at the bar at Saracen in Waincott and was following her home in his car when the incident took place. He is expected to testify that she asked him "Did I just kill someone?" when they arrived at her house. They then enjoyed a "passionate tryst," allegedly fueled by alcohol. The prosecution is also expected to point out that Ms. Jennemann was intoxicated at the time she hit Mr. Yarrell. It was too late, by the time she was arrested two days later, to test her blood alcohol level to see if it was elevated beyond the legal limit for operating a motor vehicle.

Ms. Jennemann maintains that she believed she had hit a deer, and therefore only stopped briefly at the scene, but didn't check closely. The next day, Jennemann brought her 2002 Jeep Cherokee into a car repair shop and told the owner her version of the story about what happened the night before. The shop owner became suspicious about the "bloody damage" to the grille of the car, in light of the fact that he had that morning received a bulletin issued

Indians. Though the Indians had been a favorite for the role of villain in American fiction for about two hundred years, by 1991 that had been given up too. Classic John Wayne movies, where the settlers circle the wagons and the cavalry comes just in time, were pulled off television. Indians hadn't really done anything wrong since 1840. And there was considerable question about whether they had EVER done anything wrong.

Also considered as candidates for villainhood during that crisis of the early 1990s were ninjas. They looked evil enough, with their swords, black robes and masks. But they were lousy fighters. They always lost. And because they didn't speak any language that Americans had even the vaguest idea of, nobody really knew what they wanted. Ninjas were relegated to sort of second-line villainhood. They'd guard the gates. But they wouldn't have any say inside.

Finally, after much probing and searching — this was around 1994 — writers tentatively selected a new villain: The Colombian drug lord. And it worked. Greedy, ruthless, powerful and lacking in any principles of redeeming value, Colombian drug lords fit the bill. All through the rest of the 1990s and into the 2000s, Tom Clancy wrote books about defeating the drug lords. James Bond movies were about defeating the drug lords. There was plenty of work for actors such as Ricardo Montalban, Telly Savalis, and Adolfo Celi.

The strange thing is that since 9/11 and the attacks on the Twin Towers and the Pentagon, writers in America have not responded by declaring a new enemy — the Muslim extremist. Instead, the drug lord has remained king. This seems very strange. Yet I cannot recall one single action adventure film or one single work of fiction that portrays Muslim extremists ass bad guy villains.

There are numerous theories about this.

One is that the Muslim extremists, as characters, are not clearly in focus to the American public. The leaders are religious figures that espouse morality and ethics that seem okay, but then have this horrific way of achieving their goals. As characters, they seem too close to some of OUR religious leaders. As for the followers that blow themselves up, you can't do character development with such a scenario.

Another theory is that Americans have yet to go on the war footing President Bush has demanded. We are still going about our business. Rather than see these people as a threat to the nation, we see them as cowards and lunatics. They are not after power, wealth or world domination. How do you present people who just want to blow things up? Why can't they leave "bad people" to God's wrath in the afterlife? God doesn't need any help.

Finally, there is a thought that when you look straight into a fire, you cannot write about it or consider it. Our books and movies, where they involve villains, are supposed to be entertainment. It is interesting that during the Second World War the great movies were love stories (Casablanca), fantasies (Wizard of Oz) or films about financial excess (Citizen Kane). The Germans and Japanese, DURING the war years, were portrayed as cartoon figures in keeping with the censorship in effect at the time. There was a job to do. There was not even a CHANCE that the Germans or Japanese could win anything. So out the window went drama.

It was only AFTER the war, from 1945 to 1955, that movies focused on the Nazis and the Japanese. There was a great literary outpouring about this at the time, once the war was over. The Soviet Menace and the Cold War came in and as bad as they were, it just never rose to the level of a fire you could not look at.

Terrorists may be seen as something we cannot look straight at. Which leads us back to the Colombian warlords.

Long live the warlords. May they just barely get by, surviving defeat after defeat, and continue to be able to eke out a living, modest and meager, but with just enough to give them hope for the future to press on. •

Neighbor:

By Jerry Cimisi

"One of the greatest things I did for the human race was to not become a doctor," said Carl Icahn, who dropped out of medical school.

Financier, entrepreneur, corporate raider: they are all accurate terms when applied to Mr. Icahn, who has a seven acre estate on Nichols Lane in East Hampton (appropriate to his status as a billionaire) and whose proximate neighbors are Claudia Cohen and Mort Zuckerman.

Though if Icahn lives the high profile life, he is not the public persona that, say, Martha Stewart or Donald Trump casts into the culture. You would not likely see Mr. Icahn having an Apprentice-type TV show. Forbes magazine once described Icahn: "He's the quintessential outsider, whose strong preference is to shutter himself in his office, where he can juggle a dozen different negotiations at once."

The "negotiations" this "outsider" has juggled include numerous junk bond buyouts in the high-flying 80s and a controlling interest in such mammoth companies as Phillips Petroleum, Texaco and TWA. Recently, he bought an interest in General Motors — and sold it quickly.

The son of a lawyer who wanted to be an opera singer, Carl Celian Icahn was born in 1936 and grew up in a middle class neighborhood in Queens. He attended Far Rockaway High School. He did well in his studies: he went to Princeton, where he studied philosophy. Next was med school at NYU, but he dropped out and went on to Wall Street, eventually opening his own brokerage firm, Icahn and Company, in 1968.

Icahn's greatest financial coup was probably his takeover of TWA in September, 1985. It was an airline with a rich history, controlled for 25 years (from 1939 to the mid 60s) by Howard Hughes. TWA had been the first to fly Boeing 747s. On the passenger comfort side, it was the first airline to show in-flight movies, beginning with a Lana Turner pic in 1961. About a decade later, TWA instituted the first no-smoking section on an airline.

During Icahn's reign, TWA absorbed Ozark Airlines on October, 1986. From September 11-21, 1987, Pope John Paul traveled on a specially configured TWA 727 and 747.

In September, 1988, Icahn took the company private, a move that earned him $469 million. A year later, he moved TWA's corporate headquarters from Third Avenue in Manhattan to Mt. Kisco, New York.

But just as the end of the 80s saw a collapse of the free-wheeling financial deals that Icahn had profited so greatly from, TWA was also suffering. In January, 1992, TWA filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. The following January, Icahn resigned as chairman of TWA.

(Incidentally, TWA soon after moved its headquarters from Mt. Kisco to St. Louis, but in January 2001, the airline was absorbed by American Airlines.)

Of course, this was only one chapter in the many chapters of the story of Carl Icahn. If a 1991 act of Congress banned the sort of junk bond leveraged buyouts that had put Icahn on top, he, unlike Michael Milikan, was a straight shooter, according to all accounts. He went on making deals.

An attempt to rescue Marvel Comics from financial troubles proved unsuccessful. Marvel survived, but Icahn moved on; he was not there to see the Hulk and Spiderman made into feature films.

But Icahn had always been a gambler. In fact, he had begun his career in arbitrage with $4,000 he had won at poker. He had an account at Caesar's Atlantic City — the story goes that the account was for $1 million, though Icahn usually bet no more than $10,000. He bought into the bankrupt Sands casino and Hotel. Icahn also bred horses; his concern has produced 29 stakes winners.

It might have been a gamble to put $6 million in Cadus Pharmaceutical to keep that company afloat. Cadus was owned by ImClone, the company owned by Sam Waskal; yes, Martha Stewart's "partner" in big business's most recent scandal. Now, if Cadus had gone under, that might have reined in ImClone's reach and perhaps there would not have been a potential cancer-fighting drug that ImClone had tried to market.... but such are the coincidences of life.

He certainly has done well over the years. In 1999, Forbes put Icahn's fortune at $4.2 billion, one of the largest personal fortunes in the world.

Like a lot of men of great wealth, Icahn has seen the need to share a bit of it. He established the Carl C. Icahn Charter School in the Bronx. The school is in one of the poorest neighborhoods in the country. In addition to funding the school in partnership with the Foundation for Greater Opportunity, Icahn spent $3 million for renovations at the school.

Charter schools are public schools with greater flexibility as to curriculum and bureaucracy, but they are given a specific time by the state to show they are teaching effectively, or their mandate or charter is dissolved.

The Icahn Charter School has 209 school days as opposed to the 180 day average of most schools, and it has a slightly longer day: 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m.

Of Icahn's more recent forays into megabusiness: In 2000 he bought 15 percent of General Motors. An almost bland anecdote by another Hamptons financier, Steven Ludsin, illustrates Icahn's casual nature. Ludsin saw Icahn on the beach, and congratulated him on the GM purchase. Icahn merely laughed and said, "Thank you."

But Icahn said he was annoyed that GM leaked the deal early in the game, saying GM did this to boost their stock. Icahn abruptly divested himself from the company.

Icahn would often buy an appreciable share in a company and then grouse as to its direction — and then influence its direction. A case in point is VISX, which markets a laser eye procedure. Icahn owned just under 10 percent of the stock. Apparently he wanted to push

VISX to be sold to a pharmaceutical or medical device company and sought to back his own candidates for the board. It was a course he had followed with Nabisco Holdings

So even into this century, Icahn remained "the quintessential outsider," who once said, "Boards don't like tough, abrasive guys."

Perhaps Icahn complements this aggressive business arena with his art collection. Like many of the super rich, he collects: in his case, old Masters and Impressionists. Though it is likely that this other side of human endeavor serves as a respite — if not simply another investment — for Icahn's more natural passions.

Last autumn he bought 7 percent of Eastman Kodak. The venerable photography giant seems poised on expanding its realm of imagery to digital cameras and inkjet printing. Whatever its path, Icahn will be there, even if only briefly, to push it along.

Authors Writing About The Hamptons

Patricia O'Keefe has enjoyed ocean swimming and the social milieu of the Hamptons as a 19-year resident. She is a former model and fundraiser who now teaches. The Mansion Builders is her first novel. Following is an excerpt from Chapter 20.

The Mansion Builders by Patricia O'Keefe

Chapter 20

Brittany didn't know he was here yet. There arose in him an escalating feeling of anticipation at the thought of her, which all his powers of control could not subdue. She would arrive at Sans Souci any day. Finally, the Rolls-Royce in her driveway announced her presence.

Their backyards were separated by a huge privet hedge as impenetrable as a fortress. After work, as Andrew lay at his pool, he could hear her closeness on the other side. . . the "thwack" of her tennis ball and her partner's back and forth, her cheers of victory at the end of the game if she won, her flirtations, and the sound of the water splashing in her pool as she swam. She was so near that he could sometimes smell the scent of her perfume if the wind shifted into the right direction, and yet so far that they could have been worlds apart. Her life was full of enchantment, fed as it was by multitudes of money. And she was on the loose — rich, elegant, and snobby, but totally careless of others in her quest for fun. Restlessly, he moved about on his chaise lounge. He remembered her every nuance with an overwhelming surge of desire, which was turning into obsession. She was the key he had so urgently sought all of his life, the entrée into a world that was not his, but that he was determined to possess. Vividly, he remembered her scrutinizing him during the polo games last year and their fleeting kiss. Her sensuality oozed through that protective cool shell of propriety, and he knew he had to have her. Pensively he sipped his scotch, and heard her laughter through the hedge. Was it possible to broach that unyielding boundary?

Andrew didn't see her until the last polo match in June. Then he spied her, mother-of-pearl binoculars in hand, watching him. He slammed the ball with his mallet and hit it to the goal line, stunning opponents and horses alike. Her eyebrows arched in approval. At the end of the chukker, the team stopped playing to change horses.

Sweat gleamed over his rippling biceps and soaked through his crisp, white polo shirt. It clung tightly to him, outlining the dimensions of his well-developed torso. As he glanced over at her, he saw the look of pure sexual pleasure on her face as she examined him inch by inch, muscle by muscle, until at last their eyes met. Her provocative jade ones bore into his. At that moment he knew that the fortress had been reft asunder and a crevice, if not an absolute archway, had been etched out by her just for him. She smiled a deep, lazy smile, entrancing, beguiling, inviting him to try.

Like a temptress, she walked over to him while he dismounted. She tilted her head saucily to one side. "I understand from the Ostermeyers that we're neighbors."

"Yes," he grinned, "but only for the season."

"What brought you out here?"

"I needed to be close to my development at Cornsilk Landing," he lied, "and one of my clients wanted to rent my estate in Quogue, while I was building his villa in Middle Creek Point."

"Oh, isn't that interesting. It should be a lively summer then." She gave him a provocative look, with a hint of intrigue in it, then turned and left to rejoin her date.

BREAKING NEWS

Judge Eve Preminger has been approving millions of dollars in legal fees from murdered millionaire Ted Ammon's estate, and it is beginning to look like she might have something to gain. Preminger and Susan Frunzi, a bank lawyer, are co-authors of a legal manual published annually. So what? Well, it turns out that Susan Frunzi works for Schulte, Roth, & Zabel, the firm that has billed Ammon's estate for $3.8 million since his death. Frunzi's firm represents JP Morgan Chase and, coincidentally, Judge Preminger is a stockholder. Preminger is haunted by another case in which she allowed the multi-million dollar estate of silk flower heiress Adrienne Lefkowitz to linger in court for sixteen years as she approved high expenses.

Correction

In an article written by Ana Daniel on page 21 of our April 16, 2004 issue, words were inadvertently left out of part of a paragraph due to a typing error.

How this part of the paragraph should have read was:

To become an incorporated village under New York State law an area not exceeding five square miles or coinciding with a school district must have five hundred regular inhabitants. The legal definition of a regular inhabitant was recently reaffirmed by Justice John J. Jones of the Suffolk County New York State Supreme Court [index #03-238733] as "a person who resides in the territory, except if they maintain a residence outside the territory where they vote."

What we published which gave an inaccurate view of this definition was as follows:

To become an incorporated village under New York State law an area not exceeding five square miles or coinciding with a school district must have five hundred regular inhabitants. The legal definition of a regular inhabitant was recently reaffirmed by Justice John J. Jones of the Suffolk County New York State Supreme Court [index #03-238733] as "a person who resides in the territory where they vote."

Altar Table - $7,800

Although of manifold use, large tables are most frequently associated as the centerpiece of the scholar's studio. This elegant "Altar Table" with fine carvings on its sides was used for painting, calligraphy and reading. The piece measures 106" wide by 21 inches deep by 34" high. In a traditional setting it can be placed against a wall of a living room, dining room, or hallway. In ancient China ceremonial objects such as on vessels, images of Buddhist and Daoist deities were placed. A scroll painting was usually hung directly above. This magnificent piece can be used and admired in any home.

something wrong with the Backpack. I was sure of it now.

Maybe I should just print out the letter from the old laptop, I thought. But then I remembered the new state-of-the-art laptop has the very latest cable connector in the back and the old laptop doesn't have the new model connector. I'd have to find an obsolete cable. I think it's called an RS232 cable. And I think I have one in the filing cabinet.

At this point, the people arrived with the replacement cartridge for the fax machine. They put it in. They pressed START and a whole lot of junk faxes started coming in one at a time. There was a menu from a local deli. A press release from the Water Authority. This week's message of faith and hope from a local religious leader. Finally, the junk stopped. And then it dawned on me. The reason the old laptop wasn't sending was because the fax line was involved with the junk mail people, sending things over and over. That's why there was no dial tone and that's why my old laptop couldn't break in on the telephone line. Also, the reason I wasn't getting a message about this was because the fax machine has a window that only gives one message. And CHANGE CARTRIDGE had priority.

Now I could email my story to AOL. And when the SENDING problem with AOL got straightened out, which I hoped would be soon, I could email it to production.

Quickly, before another fax could come in, I clipped into the fax phone line again, typed in the file name and pressed SEND. Off it went. And then, pop, it arrived on the state-of-the-art laptop. Success.

I was out of my chair and standing up. A thought occurred to me. Maybe I couldn't send my story to production downstairs on AOL yet, but I could print it out. I could print it out and WALK the print out downstairs and THEY could re-type it down there. Who knew how long AOL would be down? The story wasn't that long. Maybe it would take twenty minutes to type. Tops.

I pressed print on the state-of-the-art laptop. Three things happened. It began to print, then the paper in the printer crumpled up as it went in and jammed. A voice said PLEASE CHECK THE PAPER. The second thing was I suddenly realized I could have copied the story from my state-of-the-art laptop to the CORRESPONDENCE 1996 diskette in the A drive and walked it down. I was so struck by this obvious solution I had overlooked that I sat back down in my chair, right on my Palm Pilot. It crunched. Apparently, it had been knocked off my desk when I stood up. I felt a searing pain.

And that's why I am in the emergency room at Southampton Hospital waiting to have a doctor look for some broken glass and put some stitches put into my butt.

It occurs to me that I forgot my cell phone. It's on my desk. I ought to call back to the office and tell them to plug it into the AC charger. Where's my cell phone? Uh-oh, right now I have to go into triage. I know. I'll get the nurse to lend me a quarter for the pay phone.

Can you sue people if you sit on your Palm Pilot?

by Southampton Police detectives to car repair shops to be on the lookout for a damaged SUV. He alerted police, and they went to Jennemann's house to question her. They later matched pieces of the grille to other parts found along the shoulder of the highway at the accident scene.

The victim was 38 years old and a father of three young children. One, 4 year old Henry, attended court one day this week, with his mother, grandmother, aunt and uncle. Different members of the family travel each day from their respective homes, some of them up to three hours each way, to sit in on the trial and watch over the progress. They believe it is imperative that the jury see Mr. Yarrell as the person he was, father, husband and son, and not just a migrant potato picker from North Carolina. In fact, he had come out from his home in Newark to pick potatoes for a while as a short term job.

Last year, Ms. Jennemann was indicted by a Suffolk County grand jury on 17 criminal charges. Her lawyer, James O'Rourke, still claims "This was an accident, not a criminal act." If she is convicted, she could face up to 15 years in prison. Currently, she is free on a $50,000 bond.

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Observations of an Islander #295 Master and Commander

In keeping with last week's article about the joys of boating, I think I'll talk about some boating rules, just as a general reminder.

No laughing at other people's boats. Many boats have a very homemade appearance. Just remember, professionals built the Titanic, amateurs built the Ark. If it floats in the water and can hold at least one person, it's a boat.

No mooning tourists on the ferries from your boat. Although it amuses the staff, some tourists will moon back and violate the town mooning codes.

The only effective sunscreen on a boat is called clothing.

You don't sit in a man's recliner and on a boat, you don't take the captain's favorite boat cushion. Some of you may think that is a sexist statement, i.e., to presume the captain is a male. Any male on a boat thinks he is either THE captain or the co-captain, or a captain in training. Even if a woman is the pilot, a man thinks he's supervising, but hey, it's the thought that counts! The best thing for a woman to do is to just relax and remember that the weaker sex will always be the stronger sex because of the undying weakness of the stronger sex for the weaker sex.

If you are a young woman new to boating, please remember that two ounces of Lycra does not a bathing suit make... If you insist on wearing two ounces of Lycra on a boat, you will cause many and terrible accidents. If you go topless on a boat and the ferry runs aground as a result, you will be cited for topless endangerment.

Real sailors don't have TVs, VCRs, Phone, Internet Access or anything like that on their boats. Real sailors have weatherbeaten crab nets and mismatched boat cushions and first aid kits with no Band-Aids.

The ferries have the right of way, which means you need to move right away or they will move you all the way.

Boating at the Dory does not count as actual boating, unless you bring clams for the bar.

If your boat is dry docked in your yard, you still count as sailor if you bring a bucket of salt water home and pour it over yourself while sitting in your boat with a beer. Everybody gets dry docked from time to time and we need to keep sailing, even if it's through unmowed grass. It's important for a sailor to keep beer and salt water in his veins — add a bad sunburn and it's almost as good as being on the water.

A creative name for a boat is mandatory! All boats must have good names to have good boat karma. A boat named Sinker, will. I loved the boat I saw named Empty Pockets. Moor of Menace was good, too. I saw a party boat last summer called Bring Em Young. My brother is getting a boat this summer. He'll call it, Clam O'Shanter. And we will call him, Master and Clammander...

I like to joke about drinking and boating, but in truth you can't overdo it. If you swill enough Cutty Sark, you will think your whaler can take you to Panama. Drinking Jim Beam does not mean the lighthouse can easily find you. If you drink enough Captain Morgan, you will think you are Captain Morgan and make a fool of yourself with your wench. And I don't care how many times you saw the movie, no amount of liquor you drink is going to make her think you look like Russell Crowe. Your only chance of that is to get HER to drink the grog on board.

If you come home exhausted, sunburned, sticky from salt spray and your hair looks like hell, you had a great day on a boat. And the worst day on a boat beats the best day doing just about anything else.

Wining Ducks, Top Toques, And Mom

Monday, May 17 - Martha Clara Vineyards of Jamesport and Jurgielewicz Duck Farm of Moriches invite you to the first ever "Wining Duck Experience" to be held Monday, May 17, from 6:30 - 9:30 p.m. at the beautiful de Seversky Conference Center located on Northern Boulevard in Old Westbury. The event, hosted by New York Institute of Technology, will showcase two of Long Island's most bountiful products while highlighting regional excellence in the culinary arts field.

This celebration of the famous Long Island duck paired with Martha Clara's hand-crafted wines will be prepared by some of Long Island and Manhattan's most renowned chefs. Among the luminaries are Eberhard Müller of Manhattan's Bayard and Satur Farms in Cutchogue, formerly of Le Bernardin; Guy Reuge of Mirabelle, the top flight Saint James eatery; Tom Schaudel of Coolfish; Matt Hisinger and Kent Monkan of Huntington 4-star restaurant Panama Hatties; Doug Gulija of Southampton's superb Plaza Café; and the talented Mark Mittleman of Aquebogue's Fauna.

Guests will enjoy each chef's signature duck dish made with Jurgielewicz Duck Farm birds, paired with wines from Martha Clara Vineyards. This exciting culinary forum is a Long Island wine event not to be missed.

Tickets are $55 and reservations should be made in advance by calling 516-686-7545.

Local upcoming Martha Clara events include this weekend's Brut, Brie, Baguettes & Oysters featuring a reception and informative seminar by winemaker Gilles Martin, who will explain the disgorgement process of the vineyard's award-winning sparkling wine - Brut Methode Champenoise. 7 -10 at the vineyard, $20 in advance, $30 at the door. Space is limited so reserve your tickets early by calling 631.298.0075 ext. 22.

On May 1 Martha Clara presents the WPKN Concertfest Benefit Experience with the sounds of local talent, including Southampton's Thunderbird Sisters, while supporting a favorite radio station. From 12-6 p.m., $5 donation to benefit WPKN.

Celebrate Mother's Day, May 9, as Martha Clara invites all mothers to enjoy a free glass of wine. From 11 a.m.-6 p.m. Also on tap for moms is a cooking demonstration featuring Jenny Downing of Orient Point's Fat Rabbit from 12:30-2:30 p.m. For further information on all above events, call the Martha Clara at 298-0075.

Murder, Passion, and Suicide

It's All Part Of A Season's Work For The Opera Of The Hamptons

By Roy Bradbrook

For thirteen summers, Opera of the Hamptons has entertained appreciative audiences across eastern Long Island with their productions. Venues have ranged from vineyards to schools to lawns running down to the water's edge. And all have been delightful.

But this year the company has the added excitement of creating some local history when, on Saturday, July 31, they will bring opera back to the beautifully restored bijou, Vail Leavitt Theater in Riverhead, for the first time in over a century. Around the time the theater opened its doors in October 1881, Puccini was first being recognized as a composer of note, and it was in 1896 that his beautiful opera La Boheme was first performed in Turin under the baton of Toscanini himself.

Today, La Boheme is one of the most loved operas in the world, and even those who have never seen a performance will almost certainly be familiar with some of the arias. Set in Paris in the mid-19th century, La Boheme tells the story of the bohemian life of a group of artists, painters, and sculptors doing what many young artists still do today: living in dilapidated apartments while looking for that one true, financially rewarding love and worrying about where the next meal or rent payment is coming from, while still keeping their zest for life and optimism that one day soon they will be successful.

"The Vail Leavitt Theater is a real rarity, a perfectly preserved and restored 19th century opera house," said Barbara Giancola, the artistic director of the company. "When we met with Vince Tria, who has worked so hard with his colleagues to bring this landmark theater back to life for the people of Riverhead and Long Island, the opportunity to perform in this historic venue and bring opera back once more to this stage promises to be a thrilling adventure. La Boheme is perfect for this setting and we are very fortunate that both Maria Ciccaglione's and David Katz's schedules allow them to return again for this production to recreate the leading roles of Mimi and Rodolfo, star-crossed lovers, roles they so brilliantly brought to life in our previous two productions of Boheme."

Before this landmark Riverhead date, which promises to be a sellout, Opera of the Hamptons will be at The Morriss Center in Bridgehampton throughout May for a residency that will enable students of all ages to be introduced to music, singing and the world of opera. The program culminates in a fully staged production, open to the public on June 5, of Hansel & Gretel, that beloved, if somewhat scary, children's story by the Grimm Brothers, which Humperdinck turned into an enchanting opera. For those of you who have forgotten, it tells the story of two children lost in a forest who meet a wicked witch who lives in a gingerbread house and likes to turn children into gingerbread and eat them! She is finally outwitted by Hansel and Gretel and pushed into her own oven releasing all the children, and so everyone lives happily ever after. Apart from the witch, of course. In this production, Hayden DeWitt will sing Hansel, Shira Devra Flam the role of Gretel, and Deborah Field will play the ill-fated witch with the sweet tooth.

Opera of the Hamptons season also includes two major productions at Castello di Borghese Vineyards in Cutchogue. Ann Marie and Marco Borghese have been enthusiastic patrons of so many aspects of the arts on Eastern Long Island ever since they purchased the winery, and the opera productions there are now regarded as major events on the Long Island artistic calendar.

On June 19 another marvelous opera by Puccini, Tosca, will be staged at Borghese with Rosa D'Imperio as Tosca, Derrick Alton as Cavaradossi, and Steven Fredericks as the wicked and sadistic

Baron Scarpia. Tosca is, without doubt, one of the jewels in the operatic repertoire, which has been staged in all of the world's top opera houses and sung by so many stars. The role of Tosca is one of the major roles in the operatic repertoire and was considered by many as Maria Callas' major achievement. This story of political persecution, torture, passion, murder and deception also has wonderful music and a superbly flowing score, which keeps the audience on the edge of their seats as the plot goes through twists and turns. Happy ending? No. Like most operas, love is usually terminated by bullets, knives or, as in Boheme, illness. But audiences still depart enthralled and humming their favorite arias.

In contrast to this drama, the summer season will come to a close with an evening that now is an integral part of the celebration of Long Island Wine Weekend.

Returning to Castello di

Borghese on August 21, but this time in the open air and in a picnic and festive mood, patrons will enjoy an evening of music and song, ">From Opera to Broadway," this year hopefully without the display of thunder and lightning that made last year exciting to the audience and rather precarious for the singers, who coped with the elements in a truly professional manner.

All in all, the upcoming season promises to be an exceptional one for Opera of the Hamptons. See you there.

For more information and to order tickets, Opera of the Hamptons can be reached at 631-728-8804.

The World Of Charles Winheld At Icehouse Gallery In Greenport

The Icehouse Gallery and Screening Room, located at 414 First Street, announces its exhibition of the rarely exhibited paintings of Charles Winheld.

Born in Philadelphia, Winheld lived in Brooklyn and Manhattan until moving to Greenport at the end of 2001. He attended the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts and later the Art Students League of New York, and he has exhibited in Manhattan, Philadelphia and Greenport. A characteristic fusion of abstract patterns and partly conceptual color with more or less recognizable urban scenes has been the predominant aspect of his work. The junkyards, vacant lots, and desolate industrial scenes that appear in most of his work lend themselves easily to this approach.

Winheld, whose present medium is tempera mixed with resin or beeswax, never understood painters who begin with an abstraction or claim to paint feelings rather than images.

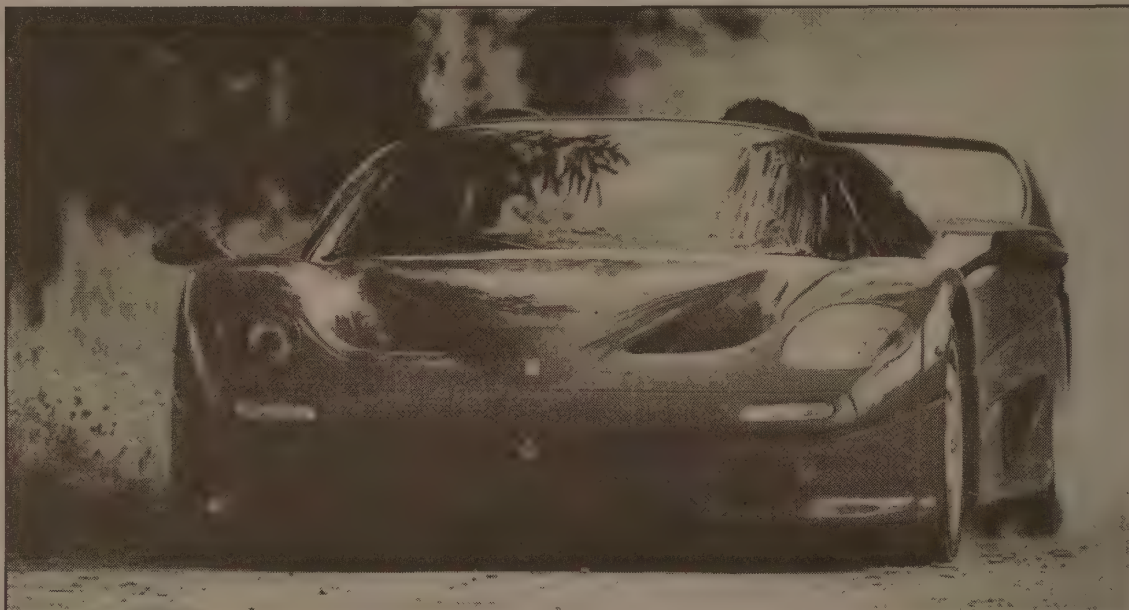

"I admire the work of those that do this, but when I attempt this sort of thing there is no creative tension, drive or visualization and the results become something like visual muzak."

The show opens May 1 and runs through May 28. There will be an artist's reception May 1 from 4-7 p.m. Call gallery owner/curator Hannah Gray at (631) 445-1459 for details.

Big Event of the Week Ferrari Comes To Cutchogue At Galluccio Vineyards

1996 Ferrari F50

Enzo Ferrari, who was born in 1898 near Modena, Italy, went to his first car race in Bologna at age 10 with his father, and the rest is history.

While working at a small carmaker in the early 1900s, Ferrari took up racing, and in the early 1920s he went to work for Alfa Romeo, a position he held for nearly 20 years. In 1940 Ferrari left Alfa and started a new company called Auto-Avio Costruzioni Ferrari. In 1946 work began on the first ever Ferrari motorcar, the 125 Sport. This car started a grand tradition of winning for Ferrari. Since its first race in 1947, Ferraris have won over 5,000 races on tracks worldwide.

Though Enzo Ferrari is famous for his eponymous auto, he actually built only a few cars bearing his name and his iconic prancing horse logo. In 1969 he sold 50 percent of his company's share capital to the Fiat group, a figure that grew to 90 percent in 1988, the year that he died at the age of 90. But Enzo Ferrari's legacy lives on in the form of legendary sports cars that, aside from personifying speed and elegance, still quicken the pulse of racing enthusiasts everywhere.

Celebrate the tradition of the Ferrari legend at Galluccio Family Wineries on the Main Road in Cutchogue this Saturday, April 24, with a world class Ferrari car show in association with the Ferrari Club of America. The vineyard expects over 50 cars to be on hand and available for public viewing at noon. Call 631-734-7089 for more info. -S.W.Simm, wine@danspapers.com

Bombay Comes To Brookhaven

Beyond Curry: Bansuri And Biryani Make For A Memorable Evening

Although we are blessed in eastern Long Island with restaurants offering food from many parts of the world, one of my pet peeves is having to go to Stony Brook or Lake Grove to satisfy my love of Indian food. It's not just curry! Indian food reflects the cuisine of an immense sub-continent and the food varies greatly from northern Hindustan down to the old Portuguese colony of Goa by the Indian Ocean. Good Indian food offers sauces to delight all palates and has an elegance deriving from centuries of refinement.

So it was wonderful that the BERA-Indian American Association of Brookhaven National Laboratory offered a rare treat a few weeks ago with a special dinner-concert. After a great buffet dinner with food brought in from one of the best places in Jackson Heights, the Darbari Ensemble, four very talented musicians, delighted the large audience with a selection of music from the Hindustan region of the country.

Now, Indian music is different to Western ear, but Ravi Shankar, the legendary exponent of the sitar, gained a great following. And Pandit Ramesh Misra is a world-renowned exponent of the sarangi – a very difficult string instrument – and Pandit Samir Chatterjee is an equally renowned player of the percussion drums known as tabla. They were joined by two Americans, Allyn Miner on sitar and Steve Gorn on the Indian wooden flute known as Bansuri. Both of these musicians studied for many years in India with some of the top teachers of their instruments.

Raga is an improvisational form of music from Hindustan where the sounds and styles of the instruments are explored to demonstrate their full potential. One instrumentalist starts and then the theme is taken up by another who raises it to a new level, passes it along, and so on. In many ways it resembles a jazz session where musicians perform riffs and pose challenges to their colleagues. In an atmosphere of relaxation and incense plus an appreciative audience, this introduction for us into the world of raga was a great experience. The fascinating interactions and the dexterity of the musicians were incredible.

The organizers of this event did a great job and certainly we look forward to their next evening of food and music, Indian style. After all, with Bombay Nights, the latest Andrew Lloyd Webber-inspired musical imported from London's West End opening next month on Broadway, this may well set the music fashion for the summer and onwards.

ART COMMENTARY By Marion Wolberg Weiss

KEN ROBBINS AND WALTER US AT LIZAN TOPS

While local landscapes by photographer Ken Robbins and painter Walter Us are a particularly welcomed sight after our long periods of inclement weather, there's more to these works than meets the eye: it's not merely the sunny disposition they evoke, but the iconic images they impose.

Let's face it, familiarity gives us a sense of comfort, continuity and reassurance that the world will not end tomorrow. On the East End, such familiarity resides in beach scenes with indigenous details: fences, beach grass, dunes, paths. Both Robbins and Us capture these details with ardor. But what makes the pieces different, especially in Robbins' works, is the juxtaposition of natural iconic shapes and aesthetic devices that render them "unnatural."

Beach Access, Sagaponack, by Ken Robbins

Consider Robbins' "Curves," awash with a shimmering, lighting effect which makes viewers think they are experiencing life on another planet. The photographer's "Copper Dazzle" serves as an additional example where the beach site looks like gold. A mixture of light and shadow also creates an unnatural effect in "Wild Surf." But its meaning is entirely different, where light streaming through the dark clouds in the background contradicts the well-lit beach fence in the foreground: the fence produces a comfort zone, a barrier of sorts against the gathering clouds.

Strange and convoluted as it may seem, this critic recalls the composition and lighting in two films, John Ford's Searchers and Quentin Tarantino's current Kill Bill Vol. 2 where John Wayne and Uma Thurman, respectively, stand in a fore-grounded, dark doorway which looks out onto a sunny open space. However, the lights and shadows are reversed: the figures are surrounded by darkness; the outside is bathed in light.

Here, the background and foreground create a frame-within-a frame, with Wayne and Thurman representing the endangered family and the open spaces signifying hope. The opposite is true in Robbins' work where we do not want to step beyond the foregrounded boundaries marked by the fence.

Although there's seemingly little delineation between background and foreground in Us' paintings, his iconic imagery is documented as well, combining the Hamptons' natural settings with evocative effects. These effects primarily lie in the artist's arresting color which, oddly enough, produces areas of safeness and danger, at least according to this critic's sensibility. Thus, while Us doesn't use light and shadow like Robbins, his hues do account for similar juxtapositions.

The current show will be on view at East Hampton's Lizan Topps Gallery until May 9.

HONORING THE ARTIST: EILEEN SERWER

This week's cover by Eileen Serwer is particularly welcomed. Who wouldn't want to regale at a beach scene replete with colorful umbrellas and a gentle breeze? Who cares if we even get sand in our lunch? It's such a pleasure to merely be there. Just as it is a pleasure to look at Ms. Serwer's work and imagine we are actually on the beach.

Of course, we could be on any beach, not the one we imagine in the Hamptons. And that's all right with Ms. Serwer. As she puts it, "I travel every place, taking photographs. The setting could be anywhere. I want to establish a mood; I don't go for many details."

Ms. Serwer brings a varied background to bear on her art. She's been an elementary school teacher, a real estate broker and an interior designer. Regardless of these professional pursuits, however, she's known since she was in the sixth grade that she's wanted to be an artist. And she's also known that despite the ensuing years, she'd "get back to her dream of being an artist." In 1990, Ms. Serwer did indeed get back to art. She threw herself into the fray full time, spending her days doing pastels and "not having to satisfy anyone but myself. I am creating for myself, not a client. I am trying to be the best I can be," she says with candor and commitment.

Improving herself means diverse things to Ms. Serwer. First, it often means putting a work away and taking it out, several years later, to work on it again. "I never throw anything away," she notes.

It also means traveling with her husband, a professional photographer, to places near and far, jumping out at a moment's notice to capture an image on film. Being stopped by the police for taking pictures doesn't seem to phase her, either. It's all in a day's work.

Whether it's England or Italy or Westhampton Beach, Ms. Serwer looks for images where light and shadow create patterns and where composition is striking. Most images have been landscapes, but she displays a wide range of subject matter, including her Central Park neighborhood or buildings on a canal. She has even done pastels of New York street scenes bustling with traffic or markets.

When asked what draws her to these settings, Ms. Serwer admits, "It's the idea of infinity that the background space evokes." She pauses for a minute and laughs. "It's the light at the end of the tunnel that I'm attracted to."

However, Ms. Serwer is primarily drawn to nature, especially fields and ponds. She recalls saying that every time she sees something breathtaking she says, "I'll have to come back here. But it's never the same if you do go back. You can't pinpoint nature. You just happen upon it."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Serwer's work can be seen at Southampton's Chrysalis Gallery and has been selected for an exhibit by the International Association of Pastel Societies.

theatre reviews: intimate apparel & match...by gordin & christianano

The gifted actress Viola Davis is giving a wonderfully moving performance in the beautifully crafted new play by Lynn Nottage at the Laura Pels Theatre.

Ms. Davis is Esther, an African-American seamstress living in a respectable boarding house in turn of the century's Lower Manhattan. She has worked hard all her life and saved her money, too, with dreams of one day opening her own beauty salon in Harlem. Esther, after all, has a talent for making beautiful things, like the richly detailed garments she sews for her clients.

Still a romantic at 35, Esther is also a virgin with ambitions beyond just business. She has lived in the boarding house for 18 years and watched as 21 of its residents have married. Now, as she makes a wedding garment for the 22nd, we learn also of her longings for true love and of her budding correspondence with George (Russell Hornsby), an attractive West Indian working on the Panama Canal, who we see on stage, reading his letters. Esther, however, cannot read or write and has enlisted the aid of her landlady, Mrs. Dickson (Lynda Gravatt), who scolds her for her foolish notions.

As the play unfolds we learn of Esther's budding friendship with Mr. Marks (Corey Stoll), an orthodox Jewish salesman, from whom she buys her fabric and who is cautiously smitten with Esther. We also meet two customers with whom Esther is forging friendships - Mrs. Van Buren (Arija Bareikis), the lonely wife of a wealthy Fifth Avenue businessman and Mayme (Lauren Velez), a colored prostitute.

That Ms. Davis is so effective in the title role is due to many factors, not only her remarkable gifts as an actress, but also the stunningly simple production she is given of Ms. Nottage's drama, which is a glimmering gem of multifaceted complexity. The play is so deeply layered with nuanced thought and rich details that it allows Ms. Davis to build her characterization upon the truth of the situations. She is further supported by a talented cast of actors, who all make remarkable contributions under the fine direction of Daniel Sullivan. Russell Hornsby is particularly potent in a challenging role, bringing an intense pride to the laborer she marries. The lighting, too, is graceful, never going to black as scenes overlap from one to another, so that we get a sense of the accumulation of time and an overlapping of the action.

Lynn Nottage is an impressive playwright and her play has been given an outstanding production by the Roundabout Theatre Company. The evening is a satisfying reminder of just what the theatre is all about...simply marvelous!

Frank Langella is so wonderfully convincing in Stephen Belber's new play Match that he almost singlehandedly lifts the ordinary material to the level of poignant. Mr. Langella plays Tobi Powell, an aging dancer/choreographer with an illustrious checkerboard past. He brings a delicious mix of contradictions to the role and is such an immense delight that you willingly follow him anywhere. This is no easy task, given the thin material he is asked to work with, but elevate it he does. He is a captivating presence with a huge talent, reveling in his gifts and the opportunity to show them off. The story of a lonely man forced to deal with the secrets talk, little substance, but we merrily tag along hoping for more, not really caring in the end because of the sublime Frank Langella.

The play has been given an excellent staging, and the set, by James Noone, of a humble, yet comfortable Inwood apartment boasting a lifetime of stuff, is wonderfully realistic. Directed by Nicholas Martin with a light touch, Match also features the movie star Ray Liotta and the Tony Award winning actress Jane Adams. They do a good job trying to make more of the script, but are stymied by the author, who brings us to a dead end with a forced catharsis.

Intimate Apparel is now playing at the Laura Pels Theatre, 111 West 46th Street. For tickets call 212-719-1300. Match is playing at Broadway's Plymouth Theatre, 236 West 45th Street. For tickets call 212-239-6200

Guy de Fraumeni's Hollywood in The Hamptons

The Disney Organization seeks to drum up more nationalistic fervor by reviving the near mythic saga of The Alamo, with a "Last Stand" realism of epic proportions that winds up reducing the pounding bass drum patriotism to the hollow rat-tat-tat of an open snare. Do you remember Remember the Alamo? way too long ago, our history classes made the slogan as necessary to commit to memory as "1492." Then the Disney Entertainment factories made the coonskin cap more memorable than the guy under it, Davy Crockett, who, with sturdy compatriots like Sam Houston, James Bowie and William Travis (according to legend), held the Alamo for 13 days against all odds. With a handful of other stubborn, brave souls they attempted to keep Texas independently American by fighting off an army of thousands of Mexicans. The famous 1836 battle cry tends to slip from memory from time to time as other events take precedence, such as "Remember Pearl Harbor" also the recentish subject of a Disney uplifting, face-lift recollection. The Alamo, as compared to John Wayne's simplistic 1960 Alamo, does try to avoid jingoistic slogan slinging hoop-la by removing some of the varnish that glossed the central characters' portraits, painted by time and Texan's ideas of size proportions, but, in doing so makes the already questionable historical accuracy less likely to produce a blind belief in the reasons for the carnage.

It's a mighty odd bunch, beginning with the heavy drinking of Gen. Houston (Dennis Quaid).

The Alamo

Bowie's famous knife, now grown to humongous lengths, only cuts down Col. Bowie (Jason Patric) to a smaller stature as dealing with a terminal illness. Lt. Col. Travis (Patrick Wilson) is an officer but not a gentleman. He has left his wife and children out there – somewhere. All is left to good ol' Davy Crockett (Billy Bob Thornton), to steal the thunder of starring role and even that of the Showdown. Given a lot to do, including fiddling while The Alamo burns, Mr. Thornton earns his laurels the hard way – he acts as the frontiersman, politician and a media personality star, including portrayals on the stage by actors wearing buffalo-size raccoon hats.

Fort-like is Billy Bob's ability to make Crockett a flesh-and-blood player in this museum-like diorama peopled by a pale-tinted, plaster cast with pretty sepia backgrounds by cinematographer Dean Semler. When Davy (he preferred David, the well-researched movie tells us) dies in the losing battle, the adobe-build movie crumbles. All is not lost, however, since the notoriety "David" had to live with grew, after his demise, to grand merchandising revenues – hardly touched by mail order Bowie knives for kids.

Lest my European readers think there is a defeatist note to the movie as directed by Disney's The Rookie director, John Lee Hancock, the ending features the resounding defeat of the overwhelming Mexican force led by General Antonio Lopez de Santa Anna (Emilio Echevarria). The victory in the fight for Texas took place at the Battle of San Jacinto and it is a brief episode in the film.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

At long last, the April air hints of spring and time to welcome back much-loved spring delicacies – artichokes, asparagus, and the first field greens – fresh, young and full of flavor. After a long winter, it simply makes sense to prepare vegetable-rich foods, particularly those that require a minimal amount of time in the kitchen. Minimal may mean just cooking for two, which I most often do.

Asparagus spears, fresh and tender, were just the inspiration I needed for dinner one evening. While waiting for a large pot of water to come to a boil and a little more time to cook the pasta, I trimmed the asparagus and heated the olive oil with a bit of butter to sauté the vegetable. I added white wine and covered the pan to finish cooking. Just before draining the pasta I seasoned the sauce and added some of the pasta cooking water. I drained the pasta and tossed it with the asparagus mixture, a grating of cheese and voila – a terrific spring pasta dinner for two.

Hearts of artichokes are indeed a delicacy and could be time consuming. Yet two artichokes only took about 10 minutes to trim into hearts. The unusual characteristics of this delectable vegetable yielded enough for up to 4 servings as a delicious side course. Romaine lettuce is prized for its long, graceful and snappy leaves. Combine it with a healthy addition of scallions and dill for a crisp, tasty spring salad, simply dressed with extra-virgin olive oil and red wine vinegar.

PASTA WITH ASPARAGUS, LEMON AND PARMESAN

With spring in the air and asparagus at the peak of its flavor, this quick dinner for my husband and me was delicious.

Serves 2

1/2 pound asparagus
Kosher salt for the pasta water
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter
2 shallots, finely chopped
2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 tablespoons dry white wine
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
1/2 pound linguine or spaghetti
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

1. Break asparagus spears where they naturally bend. Trim the points along the spears, as they could harbor sand, leaving the tender tips at the top. Soak in cold water for 10-15 minutes. Drain and pat dry. Cut spears into two-inch pieces.

2. Bring a large pot of water to a boil and put in a tablespoon of kosher salt. Then put in the pasta and cook for 8-10 minutes until al dente or firm to the bite.

3. Meanwhile, heat olive oil and butter in a large heavy skillet and put in the shallots, sauté about 30 seconds, stirring with a wooden spoon, then add the garlic. Sauté for 30 seconds longer and put in the asparagus. Toss the asparagus with the ingredients in the pan to coat and cook for about 2 minutes. Add white wine and bring to a boil. Cover pan and let cook 2-3 minutes until asparagus is slightly tender. Uncover pan and stir in the lemon juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Keep warm over simmering heat if necessary.

4. Drain pasta in a colander and transfer it to the skillet with the asparagus, add Parmesan cheese and toss vigorously to mix. Serve at once on warm plates.

ARTICHOKE HEARTS WITH LEMON AND OREGANO

Serves 2-4

1 lemon, halved
2 medium-large artichokes
1 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
1 shallot, finely chopped
1 small clove garlic, finely chopped
1/4 cup chicken broth or water
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons freshly chopped parsley leaves

1. With a sharp stainless steel knife, trim the base of the artichoke and bend the outer leaves back until they snap off. Remove several more layers in the same manner until the pale inner leaves are reached. Cut each artichoke in half through the base and rub the cut surfaces with one half of the lemon, dropping the hearts into a bowl of cold water, squeezing the remaining juice from the lemon into the water.

2. Put the hearts with the halved lemon into a saucepan of boiling salted water and cook about 14-15 minutes until tender. Drain and scrape away the chokes. Cut each heart into 2-3 wedges.

3. Warm the oil in a heavy skillet and sauté the shallot and garlic for 1 minute or so. Add the broth or water and oregano, and the artichoke pieces, and bring to a boil. Reduce the liquid to about 2 tablespoons, stir in the salt and pepper to taste, add parsley and serve warm.

Away At School... By DAVID LION RATTINER

Observing a Game

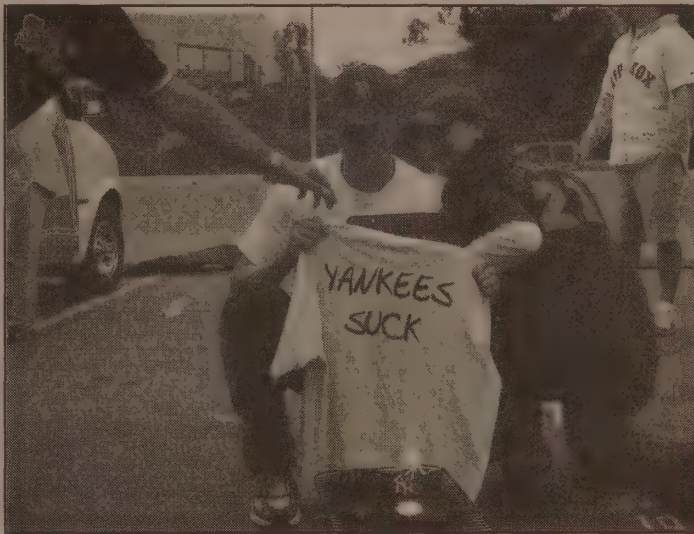

Up here in Boston it is almost impossible to miss the tremendous hatred that there is for the New York Yankees. Now that the baseball season has started, there have been numerous reports of Yankees fans being brutalized in the streets, robbed, tires slashed, even killed. It is quite simple to say that Boston is a crazy Red Sox domain of full time fans, doing everything and anything they can to both support their team and to make sure that their biggest rival, the Yankees, are aware how much they hate them.

Now, as a Yankees fan, I can tell you that it was a little weird watching the most recent series play out. The Red Sox, in short, kicked the crap out of the Yankees. I was in shock. The good old Yanks, at least I think anyway, only won one game out of a five game series. It is the beginning of the season, of course, and it doesn't really matter that they lost. But I can tell you that it matters to these Boston fans.

I walked into a bar the other day called The Clubhouse, which is obviously a sports bar, to watch the second game of the series. There was hooting and hollering. It was awesome. Everyone was caught up in the moment.

I have come to accept the fact that when I tell people in these types of places that I am a Yankees fan they are going to tell me that they hate my guts, and then probably beat the crap out of me. I don't know how I have survived in this city for so long without being kicked or punched for being a Yankees fan. I can tell you this, that more than once, I have seen guys on the subway in Boston pick a fight with someone wearing a Yankees hat. The Yankees fan almost always just stands and doesn't escalate the situation. It is a strategy that I have employed on three or four occasions. Sometimes, however, you will get a guy that is willing to stand up to three or four Irish, rosy, red-cheeked Red Sox fans, and then next thing you know, you have a verbal argument that is beyond anything that you ever thought you would see. Almost always, this situation leads to fighting words, "You *(@)$#, the Yankees suck! You want to take this outside?"

Of course, this turns into some kind of contest of wits between one fan and another. Neither one of them really wants to fight, but they pretend like they do, to act tough. This is something that I have not really mastered yet. I almost always fall for the

"I'm going to fight you" bluff and just try to calm down the enraged Red Sox fan.

When I am in a sports bar and watching a Red Sox game, I feel like I am infiltrating another country as a spy. I speak the language, know the names, I know the culture, but nobody knows I am a Yankees fan until they get to know me.

"Hey, man, where are you from?"

"Long Island."

"Red Sox fan?"

"No. Yankees."

"##$ you."

"Yep, nice to meet you too."

This is a pretty standard conversation.

No, I am kidding, this doesn't really happen, but they do kind of give me this, "Well, why the hell do you live in Boston?" look.

There really is nothing that I can do except sit back and secretly be happy when Giambi hits a homer. There is really nothing I can do but just watch the game, laugh a little when Pedro loses it, and then smile a little at how happy the whole city gets when Wakefield strikes out three batters in a row, throwing at speeds of 68 miles an hour, a speed that almost any serious ex-baseball player could throw when they used to pitch in high school.

Well, I guess it is just something that I have to deal with. I like being an outsider, especially when we win. I think that it is cool, it is like being a foreign exchange student or something. You are looked at a little differently. It is not like these people hate me personally, they just hate my kind. We are all civil, right? I mean, I got nothing to worry about, right? Well, maybe I'll just avoid cheering when Posada throws somebody out at second.

When In Manhattan...

Diddy on Broadway

Our neighbor in the Northwest Woods, Sean "P. Diddy" Combs, is a man of many talents. He's a producer of music and television, a clothing designer, restaurateur, actor, and recently, a marathon runner. He did a proficient job with his acting in Monster's Ball as a death row inmate opposite Halle Berry, but the Broadway revival of the classic Lorraine Hansberry drama, A Raisin in the Sun, is the biggest test his acting chops have had to date. This weekend at the Royale theater, audiences will have a chance to find out if he makes the cut.

A Raisin in the Sun is the story of Walter Lee Younger (Combs), of 1950s Chicago's South side, who dreams of escaping his limited world with a business deal. He's after his late father's insurance, but Walter's mother wants to use the money to move the family out of the city and into a white neighborhood. It is a gripping portrait of people whose hopes and dreams are continuously deferred. The original Raisin in the Sun premiered in 1959. It was the first Broadway play written, directed, and starring black talent, including direction by Lloyd Richards and acting by Sidney Poitier, Claudia McNeil as the mother, Diana Sands, Ruby Dee, Louis Gossett, Ivan Dixon, Glynn Turman, John Fielder, Lonnie Elder III, Ed Hall and Douglas Turner. After 530 performances, a film version followed in 1961, as did a later 1991 TV movie with Danny Glover. It was also the inspiration for the musical, Raisin. Audra McDonald and Phylicia Rashad, of The Cosby Show, are wife and mother to the Walter Lee Younger of Sean Combs. Kenny Leon directs.

The choice by producers to cast Combs has had some opposition. Actor Omar Epps' fiancée, Keisha Spivey, was discovered by Combs with her band, Total, but Epps has been outspoken about P. Diddy being "a stupid choice" to fill the shoes of the great Poitier. Epps explained it as "insulting" to the craft of acting, as it would be to music if he were to suddenly decide to produce and perform. Producer David Binder has said Combs auditioned and "we were all incredibly impressed - he's focused on the work." There is no question that whether he succeeds or not, Combs is driven and dedicated in whatever venture he chooses. We can be sure that his best effort will be present. From a marketing standpoint, it's genius. The revival is full of talented actors, and with the combination of Combs' star power, it will not only draw crowds of theater regulars, it will bring new faces to the audience. This alone may be redemption for Diddy's lack of experience. Combs is not the first rap star to try the New York stage. Mos Def wowed critics with performances in Suzan-Lori Parks' Topdog/Underdog, and later won an Obie Award for his Off-Broadway work in Parks' Fu ing A. And Heavy D appeared in Laurence Fishburne's Off-Broadway drama Riff Raff. P. Diddy aside, the team of designers and producers behind the production are an experienced group, and the play should be worth checking out, though one semi-literate online theater critic called it, "The most disturbing theater experience of my life." Take that as you will, but remember that the guy could hardly spell and he was accused of racism and snobbery by a number of people on his message board. It's probably best to make your own decision.

A Raisin in the Sun is playing at the Royale Theatre Tues-Sat at 8 p.m., Wed & Sat at 2p.m., Sun at 3p.m. Ticket prices are $66.25 - $91.25. A limited number of $26.25 tickets are available in the mezzanine for each performance. Call Telecharge.com at 212-239-6200 or 800-432-7250, or visit the Royale Theatre Box Office at 242 W 45th Street. Box office hours are Mon-Sat 10:30a.m. - 8:30p.m., Sunday 12p.m. - 6p.m. Visit telecharge.com for online orders and information.

NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

Link Clothing popped up a few months ago in the beautiful town of East Hampton. It is a small company owned by two young ladies, Monica and Nikki, friends since high school who grew up in the Hamptons. They both worked in the fast-paced fashion industry in New York City for two very successful companies, and left to start their own line of clothing. When they started designing their work, they knew the best way to get their inspiration going would be to come back to their roots in the Hamptons. Constantly being inspired by the country around them, they are doing their best to translate their surroundings and the latest fashion trends into a sexy, edgy, unique, yet everyday, wearable product.

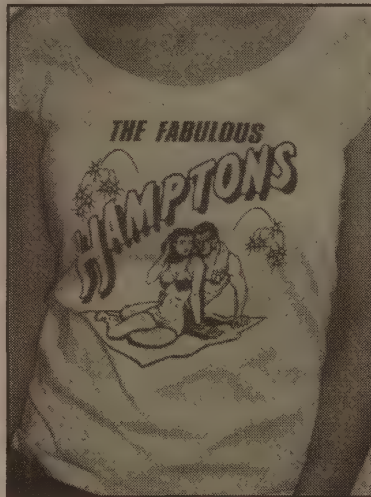

Link Clothing specializes in women's and men's, high end T-shirts that are made in the USA, using only local models to show off their wares. Some of the local shops that carry their merchandise are: Calypso, Satori, Waves, Norah's, Kim and Me, and Fahrenheit 451.

Monica and Nikki are currently looking forward to being involved in some benefits this summer and are planning to create a special line with local artists' work. The start of their business in East Hampton has provided them with a great advantage because of the supportive community and the artistic people that have inspired them.

Link Clothing can be reached at 631-329-0031 or

Monica@LinkClothing.com, or at Nikki@LinkClothing.com

Kim And Me at 91 Jobs Lane in Southampton (631-204-9211) is the brain child of Kimberly A. Curry, who studied fashion/design and honed her skills in the field by working at various retail boutiques for the last fifteen years. Her foray into the retail end began with home items which were quickly received, unique and eye-catching. In early 2004, an opportunity came up for the space in Southampton.

Link Clothing, East Hampton

Kim and Me is a high end children's and adult boutique, which displays and expresses Kim's vision of an upscale store encompassing a conglomeration of unique merchandise. Major lines include Quincy, Dries Van Noten Designs for Quincy, Judith Lacroix Liberty of London, Charabia, Baby LuLu, Chippie, Petite Bateau, Link Clothing and more.

Her products include baby buntings, bibs, blankets, full layettes, rain jackets, shoes from Robee, Superga, Steven Solario and Las Olas (Espadrills, MaryJanes and more). The shop also carries a full line of special gift items that include room sprays and candles from Blanc D'Voire, fine Italian leather frames, photo albums, diaries and note books from Daisy Arts and Eccolo.

For special gift items, there is a fine line of porcelain espresso and cappuccino cups that are made in Italy, along with a full line of Caldrea products for all household uses. Unique charm bracelets to the hottest new T-shirts for kids to the distinctive diaper bags from Fleurville for moms are available. There are also products from Betty Home Design like tables, vases and shelves. On display at all times is a collection of local landscapes by photographer George Callas which capture the local flavor of the Hamptons and is in limited edition.

Kim and Me is open Monday through Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 8 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

La Moda Ceramic has just opened its doors and is conveniently located at the doorway to the Hamptons at 50 Old Riverhead Road in Westhampton Beach (631-288-8114). Here, tile, plumbing and stone translate into style. LaModa is a full service kitchen and bath boutique that has the resources to turn any project into a "dream come true."

Offering a full line of ceramic tile, hand-molded, crackled finishes, ceramic mosaics, glass tile, tumbled stone, limestone, travertine and porcelain tiles, the experienced staff is on hand for free design consultation to help you create your own unique environment. The plumbing selections are second to none. On board is Kohler, American Standard, Ultra Bain, Newport Brass, JADO, Rohl, and SoHo, to name only a few.

Quickly becoming known as the "best kept secret in the Hamptons," granite, marble and limestone tiles are also available with custom slab fabrication for kitchen counters and fireplaces. La Moda Ceramic is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Saturday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday is available by appointment only.

MC PERFORMANCE VS. LEARNING THE COSTS OF OVEREMPHASIZING ACHIEVEMENT Wednesday, May 5th 2004 at 7:00 p.m.

• Seating is limited, advanced reservations required. $5 donation requested. • RSVP: Morriss Center at (631) 537-1028

Morriss Center Presents

The Morriss Center is proud to present Alfie Kohn, well-known lecturer and writer on contemporary pressing educational topics, on Wednesday, May 5th at 7:00 p.m. at Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor. The lecture, PERFORMANCE vs. LEARNING: The Costs of Overemphasizing Achievement, is relevant to parents, educators and school administrators, and is open to the public. This is Alfie Kohn's ONLY Long Island engagement in 2004.

Alfie Kohn

There is no better way to destroy children's creativity — or their interest in learning — than by pushing them to work harder, get good grades, and score well on tests. As Alfie Kohn will argue, many schools' attempts to be academically rigorous tend to backfire because their traditional methods rely on outdated conceptions of learning. What matters is not how motivated students are, but HOW they are motivated — that is, whether they're excited by what they're doing in school or just focused on how well they're doing. When the point is for them to prove how smart they are, they become less inclined to engage deeply with ideas, to explore and discover. Kohn will invite us to rethink how students are evaluated (since no grade may actually be the best grade) as well as whether all the talk we hear about "higher standards" may have less to do with authentic challenge than with a simplistic tendency to confuse harder with better.

Alfie Kohn is the author of nine books, including PUNISHED BY REWARDS and THE SCHOOLS OUR CHILDREN DESERVE. He has been described by Time magazine as "perhaps the country's most outspoken critic of education's fixation on grades [and] test scores." Kohn lives (actually) in Belmont, Mass., and (virtually) at www.alfiekohn.org.

Spring cleaning is on the agenda and it's time to spruce up and redecorate. Patios are getting ready for family BBQs, pools are getting cleaned, gardens are getting planted and so on and so on. Let's shop!

Everyone can use a free landscape consultation. At Hampton Nursery & Landscape, design, building and maintenance are their fortes. On West Montauk Highway in Hampton Bays, they have three acres to strut their stuff. Give a call at 631-728-1160.

Tabletop Designs by Stephanie Queller is unfortunately closing their doors for good. Located at 38 Jobs Lane in Southampton, Tabletop is offering a "thank you for the years of patronage sale" on all vintage china, stemware, flatware linens and accessories. The sale will run from Friday, April 23 through Sunday, April 25.

There is a "Grand Opening Sale" to celebrate Patio.com's newest store openings and you can take advantage of that sale at Patio.com on Montauk Highway in Southampton. This outdoor furniture store will save you up to 60% off and will beat anyone's prices by $100 on any patio set. The April sales will save you bucks on teak lounges, market and beach umbrellas, hammocks, outdoor wicker, and so much more. I love these savings, I'll take two...

At Windows & Walls Unlimited on County Road 39A in Southampton, owners Linda and Paul have slashed their Hunter Douglas window fashion collection by 65%. There is also a huge selection of custom draperies to choose from here. And, if you require motorized window treatments, you will find them here for sure.

Nearby at Casual Home Furniture & Accessories, save the tax on any purchase during the month of April along with 10% to 40% off on selected samples. If you are looking high and low for counter stools, there is a nice selection here.

With all the wood floors in the house, you can save up to 50% off at The Carpet Man on County Road 39A in Southampton's "Huge Area Rug Sale" (in stock merchandise only). The selection is tremendous and offers colors galore. Get going, the early bird always catches the worm.

Hurry to Agway Country Gardens on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton for the "Super Savings Sale" on garden necessities that will run through April 26.

How about a "Pool Sale"? Country Home Pools & Spas, located in Wainscott, is a one-stop-shop and you deal directly with the owner. There are several packages to choose from on Gunite and Vinyl pool installations. Complete landscaping, patios, decks, fencing, liners, repairs, and marble dusting are offered. Call 631-537-8036 for information.

If you are thinking of a home make-over, Blossom Haven, located in North Haven, has it all. Erica-Lynn does murals, faux finishing, custom and historic stencils, restorations, interior designs and more. She can be reached at 631-725-4785.

Aimee's Closet on Main Street in Bridgehampton is having a sale on selected merchandise. This adorable little shop has a little bit of everything for the woman on the move. Stop in and I assure you, you will not walk out empty-handed. Look for beautiful ladies' dresses, skirts, blouses, scarves, shoes, jewelry and unique accessories.

The Down Factory Store at The Elegant John on Montauk Highway in East Hampton is doing it again. The "Spring Blowout Sale" will save you 25% off on their entire inventory of 100% wool blankets, not to mention the savings on sheets, towels, Hungarian goose down comforters, and something no one should sleep without, their European featherbeds...

Off the beaten path - but well worth the trip:

The At Home en Provence store located in a turn-of-the-century ice-house, next to Duryea's Lobster Deck in Montauk, has opened its doors for the season. The store's eclectic assortment of merchandise reflects the fine traditions and sunny hues of Provence. Offerings include tableware, home furnishings and distinctive room finishing accessories, representative of traditional French Country style and decor. Colorful toiles and Provençal prints are available in table linens and bed ensembles. This year's addition of colorful and fun leisurewear by James Gunn and contemporary casual couture by West Coast designer Candice Held, complement the diverse selection of jewelry and wristwatches. Also new this year is the Dominique Picquier Paris collection of printed tote and travel bags (a store exclusive) and hip handbags by Jane Feifer. Store hours for April are Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Sundays 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

If you know of, or are having any sales and would like to share them with me, or have any questions regarding the shops, sales or where to find something special, please email me at: shoptil@danspapers.com or fax me at 631-537-0500. I would love to hear from you...

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Autobahn presence. That is the name given to the psychological image of a car as it comes up fast behind you in the left lane on the German autobahn. You may be rocketing along at 130, but there's a faster rocket behind you and it wants to pass. Do you move over immediately, or wait a few beats? If the car behind you has real Autobahn presence, you pull to the right lane instantaneously. That is how one drives not only in Germany, but in all of Europe.

The past and present kings of the Autobahn are the big, fast Sklasse Mercedes Benz four door Panzer sedans. By any European and American standard, this model Mercedes has always been faster and more powerful than the average car.

What has always given the Mercedes tremendous Autobahn presence is the visual impact of its grill. More than any other manufacturer, Mercedes has always kept the same frontal "face" throughout the years. When that big upright radiator appears in your mirror, you just know that it's a Mercedes behind you, slicing a path through the wind directly up to your rear bumper.

Over the years, BMW has tried to emulate that grill thing, with those two kidney shaped chromed air ducts in its nose, combined with their blue and white circle logo. That logo is supposed to symbolize an airplane propeller, but frankly, to me, just looks like a pretty art deco piece of porcelain. Anyway, this is the face of BMW, and it certainly works. It just doesn't have the visual impact of that tall Mercedes faux radiator with that gleaming three pointed star riding atop it.

Porsches have great Autobahn presence and they don't even have grills. They have reputation. Everybody knows Porsches are fast, so when one of those little clamshell noses appears in your mirror, you just know the little bugger is going to pass you. Not simply out of pride. Most Porsches will attack and pass you on the Autobahn just because they can. They know that you know it. Unless you are driving an AMG Mercedes, but that's another story.

Speaking of Porsches and grills, Porsches do have

grills, but because the engine is in the rear, the grills are in the back. In the late fifties, the 356 Porsche made a big deal of this modification, mainly because Porsche hardly ever changed anything on the 356 series of motorcars. From the rear, the 356 looked better with the twin grills, which supposedly kept the engine cooler. Who knows. In retrospect, the whole design exercise was probably more of a marketing ploy than an engineering exercise. After all, the air-cooled Volkswagen Beetle, the Porsche's little brother, used little louvers in its trunklid to cool its hard-working engine for over thirty years.

When it comes to big upright grills, nobody beats Rolls Royce and Bentley front end design. These two stately radiators dwarfed the Mercedes design. However, the key word here is stately, because everyone knows that these two British cars aren't fast. Yes, I know in the twenties and thirties a supercharged Bentley was the car to have. It gave a super sports Mercedes or a Bugatti a run for the money. But no more. In reality, as beautiful and well-built as they are, which is their claim to fame, they are still swift rides. But certainly, though, they are no match for a seriously driven Mercedes, BMW or Porsche in the Autobahn wars. Of course, on the rare occasion that a car like a Ferrari or Lambo strides up to your rear bumper, you know that it is something special. You move over, if not out of respect, then out of curiosity, as in "What the hell is that thing behind me?"

What about LIE presence? Here, you can't play high speed games because of our speed limits, but you do have passing games that are the direct opposite of those of the Europeans. If I am driving a Porsche and a Hummer H1 or H2 gets on my bumper, I pull my diminutive rocketship over, simply because I am worried that the behemoth behind me will either run into me or over me. Here, lumbering SUVs rule the highway. They don't handle, and are, in general, not very fast. They just have size working for them. That's LIE presence.

Sadly, here in our country, performance, reputation, handling, technical sophistication, even grills, for that matter, haven't very much meaning. If one wants to be king of the road, just buy the highest, widest and heaviest car with the tallest wheels and tires that one can find. Strange automotive values.

Restylane.®

New Restylane® - just FDA approved - does for lower face areas what Botox does for the upper. Works instantly to give both fuller, younger-looking lips and smooth away those confidence-destroying "Marionette"-Deep crag lines that frame your mouth area. They say "the eyes are the window of the soul." Now your mouth area can live up on the outside to the beauty you already have inside. Lasts 6-12 months before a "freshen-up" treatment.

EVENT: First-time-ever, workshop readings of SHAMAN, a dark musical comedy in three acts. Book and lyrics by Barry Head, music by David Torretta.

YOUR ROLE: Audience member.

DATE: Thursday and Friday, May 6 and 7

TIME: 7pm

PLACE: The John Drew Theater at Guild Hall, East Hampton

ADMISSION: Free, open seating. BUT...$10-OR a completed feedback form-to get out

Ever watched a chick peck its way out of an egg?

After long incubation, SHAMAN is about to crack its shell and take a look around. As yet unheard in its entirety even by its creators, this musical fantasy of innocence and illusion, trial and triumph, needs a participating audience. This is not "opening night." It's a bare-bones, work-in-progress, staged reading that begs you to come and be part of the hatching process. Be there at the beginning!

DIRECTOR: Jacqui Leader.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

Dance of Dahlias (Part 2)

This is the second part of a two-part article, which discusses how to create the ideal growing environment to produce prize-winning flowers, and how to store dahlias once the season is over.

Dahlias provide resilient flowers that gardeners cannot resist! The payback they provide in terms of showiness far outweighs the effort it takes to plan, prepare, and grow the plants.

Dahlias flower best in sun. When choosing a site, select one that receives six hours or more of direct sun daily. While dahlias will adapt to less light, they tend to produce fewer flowers and more leaves.

Dahlias like beds that are well drained and where soil has been enriched. To prepare a bed, excavate the soil to a depth of about one foot. Improve the soil by adding compost and peat moss to create a light, friable loam. Add about one-fourth cup of dolomitic lime and a handful of bone meal for each gallon of excavated soil. Mix the soil well and refill the bottom quarter of the hole. Water lightly.

Dahlias are sensitive to cold and must not be planted before soil has warmed to a consistent 55 degrees. That said – if plants were started in containers, remove the plants from their containers, and arrange at intervals of about one-and-a-half feet in the hole. Backfill the hole with the remaining enriched soil.

To plant over-wintered or purchased tubers, check the tubers for soft spots. If found, cut these away and dust the tubers with sulfur. Fill the bed with soil to about three inches from the surface and arrange tubers at intervals of about one to two feet. Place tubers on their sides with growing eyes facing upward. Insert stakes by each tuber to provide support as the plants grow. Backfill soil to the surface and water heavily. Add a layer of mulch such as straw, peat, or shredded bark to keep down weeds and help retain moisture.

Dahlias like water and, as they grow, must be kept moist, though not saturated. When the plants grow to a foot in height, begin monthly fertilizing with a granular fertilizer. Use a 5-10-5 fertilizer spread about two inches from the foliage. Avoid using a fertilizer richer in nitrogen. High-nitrogen fertilizer produces lots of leaves but reduces the number of flowers. Use of a granular fertilizer deters slugs who are naturally attracted to dahlia foliage.

While many gardeners prefer quantity over quality of flowers, the size of dahlia flowers can be increased by removing the lateral flower buds. As the plants grow, they form three flower buds at the ends of each branch. When the buds reach the size of peas, remove the two side buds to produce a larger flower on the central bud. Use this for dinnerplate and other large dahlias, not with bedding dahlias and other small-flowering types. The removal of faded flowers also encourages the continuous production of buds.

Dahlias are susceptible to pests and diseases and need to be checked frequently. Diseases include tuber rot, vascular wilt, mosaic virus, powdery mildew, and botrytis blight. Pests include aphids, spider mites, leafhoppers, and thrips.

Diseases and pests can be avoided or reduced by ensuring good air circulation, and by applying Malathion, Diazinon, or Orthene at the first sign of a problem.

Dahlia roots must be lifted and stored in winter. After the first Fall frost, cut foliage back to about three inches above the ground. Up-earth the tubers using a pitchfork by digging down about a foot away from the central stalk. Gently brush away soil on the clump of roots. Place clumps in a well-ventilated, shaded area to cure for about a week. Dust injured areas with sulfur to inhibit the development of any disease.

Pack the clumps upside-down in a ventilated box or basket using slightly damp vermiculite or peat moss to cover. Over the winter, store the tubers between 40 degrees and 50 degrees. Check tubers occasionally to be sure they have not shriveled. If they are shriveling, sprinkle lightly with water. Tubers stored this way will increase year to year, and provide many years of flowers.

At Rock Cottage, we have become avid dahlia enthusiasts. Our garden would be less interesting without the dahlias' vividness. No other garden plant evokes such appreciation or creates such a spectacle. Now that the newer dahlia varieties are fragrant, not even summer lilies can compete!

Ahoy! In Your Home

When attempting to rid yourself of the winter doldrums, there's no better place to start than your own environment. Unfortunately, we don't all have the luxury of altering our work atmosphere to compliment the seasonal transitions, but what we do have is the power to change the most important place of all, our home. Whether it's your summer beach house or your year round abode, your home should be your sanctuary, the one place where you can go to de-stress, to get away from all the pressures of the day. And since the winter blues have definitely gotten many of us down and the cold has overstayed its welcome, revamping your home to reflect a nautical theme is the perfect interior decorating scheme to get you ready for the summer, mind, body, and soul. Ambience is key to creating a mood that reflects your personality, style, and flair. Nautical interior design is simple in its presentation as well as light, airy, and fresh. By creating a nautical theme, you'll feel the summer breeze sweeping through your windows, the spray of the surf on your lips, and the salty scents in the air. Journey with me, if you will, to a place that has been explored by many, but still never ceases to amaze, with its sheer vastness, beauty, power, and splendor, as we travel to the depths of the deepest sea or sit on the beaches of the most exquisite shores.

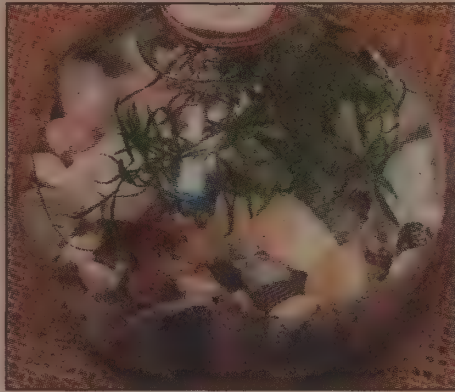

Anchors will definitely showcase your love of all things nautical whether they are displayed on lamp shades, shower curtains, place mats, table cloths, serving platters, glasses, or decorative flatware. Boats, ships, seascapes, and dunes are breathtaking focal points to any room of your home that will give you and your guests the feel of the serenity and tranquility of the undulation, yet at the same time, the contrast of the turbulent and unforgiving seas. Paintings, overhangs, and models that include the sand, surf, and those who work upon the waters are perfect additions to any beach house. Curtains and valences are paramount in accenting any room and tying any decorative theme together. Navy and white are the colors to go with to drape and intertwine on a curtain rod. Pastel colors such as apricot, pink, and periwinkle are the colors to use to accent a stark white kitchen or one with a light wood finish. Glass coffee tables showcasing glass bowls filled with beach glass, shells, sand, or light colored stones will definitely give the room the feel of a seaside cabana, complete with glass candle holders with painted dunes, sea gulls, and coral to finish off the accents. To give your paint job a nautical vibrance, a textured finish can emulate the crashing of the waves or the retreating of the tides. The walls will also feel sand-like to the touch with their three dimensional strokes. Nautical wreaths can be used to welcome your guests to the front door with sea shells, ships, sea gulls, star fish, and sea horses adorning.

Lighthouses are excellent nautical accents to any room. They should be placed on top of a mantel, armoire, or decorative table. Throw pillows with creatures of the sea painted or embroidered on them will make perfect accents to any couch with crabs, swordfish, or flounder. Lobster traps can be used for decorative tables in or outside the home. Your fine china cabinet can be used to display an ornate shell collection. Photographs and paintings of lighthouses are also beautiful nautical pieces that should be prominently displayed in the home. Flowers or candles should be showcased throughout the home in vases filled with multi colored beach pebbles, sand, or shells in water. Absolutely breathtaking additions to any home are aquariums built right into the wall with vibrantly colored fish of all shapes and sizes. Concrete sandcastles can be displayed in the bathroom with sea shell towels, soap dishes, and dispensers. The sonorous sounds of seascape music and running water cascading will give new meaning to the word relaxation. Skylights throughout the home and full-length windows which allow for a great amount of light to shine through will aid in giving a breath a fresh air to the home and let the rays of summer alter any mood. With all of these nautical themed additions, you, your family, and your guests will have a blast bathing in the beauty of your beach, the one you have created without even leaving your home.

Sage Advice From Landscape Designers

For so many of us, landscaping means putting a tree in here, placing a flower bed there, and a lawn over there. If you are like me, you relish the yearly investment in plants, especially those the neighbors will "oooh and ah" over. At the same time, none of us likes the drudgery of moving garden containers, buying and planting endless annuals, the weekly grass mowing, and endless watering.

Three prominent landscape artists interviewed for this article – Charlie Marder of Marders Garden Supply (631-537-5000), Linda Nelson (631-287-1075), and Donna Gutkin of Donna L. Gutkin Landscape Architect, PC (212-799-5316) – convinced me it is time to rethink how we design, organize, and plant our landscapes. The sage advice I received suggests it is particularly important to increase our environmental sensitivity, to use native plants, create a sense of maturity and stability, and to tempt nature to play a collaborative role in producing landscape results.

Interestingly, none of these sage landscapers started out with the intention of landscaping. Rather, landscaping was always in the background, playing a secondary role. Donna Gutkin spent her childhood in upstate New York, gardening at her family's home before going off to Cornell. It was not until she enrolled in an elective landscaping course that she realized it was time to shift her major. She is now a certified landscape architect. Charlie Marder has been a landscaping innovator on Long Island for nearly three decades. Charlie grew up in the Springs, and spent his youth digging and relocating trees – just for the pocket money. He never intended landscaping as his business and instead received a degree in Fine Arts. As Charlie mentioned, "The landscaping business grew out of my fascination with the technology for moving trees. I guess it was in my blood, though it also satisfied my desire to 'never work for anyone!'" Linda Nelson received her degree in art and painting. Over time, she was drawn into landscaping. For Linda, landscaping provides "a palette on which to integrate positive and negative spaces." As Linda voiced, "The landscape is my canvas. I use it to elaborate and extend effects. It provides an evolving, living chal-

All three sages expressed high concern about our environment. Use of too many non-organic fertilizers, high in salts and manufactured chemicals, has hardened, compacted, and dried the soil. It has also polluted ground water. It is much better to use organic fertilizers and compost. This "green gardening" approach is a growing trend across the U.S., as is a reduction in "chemical attacks" on garden pests. The trend seeks to use environmentally friendly and organically healthy practices that help plants to help themselves, and get off chemicals. Landscaping needs to go beyond chemicals and to focus on restoring biological health and balance to plants and soil.

The experts say you need to enable plants to grow healthier, not wait until they are sick. By changing the way we landscape, we can grow healthier plants that are less dependent on chemicals. In fact, "an important starting point in landscaping is to focus on improving the soil," says Charlie Marder. "This is the best investment to make for someone with a low budget for landscaping."

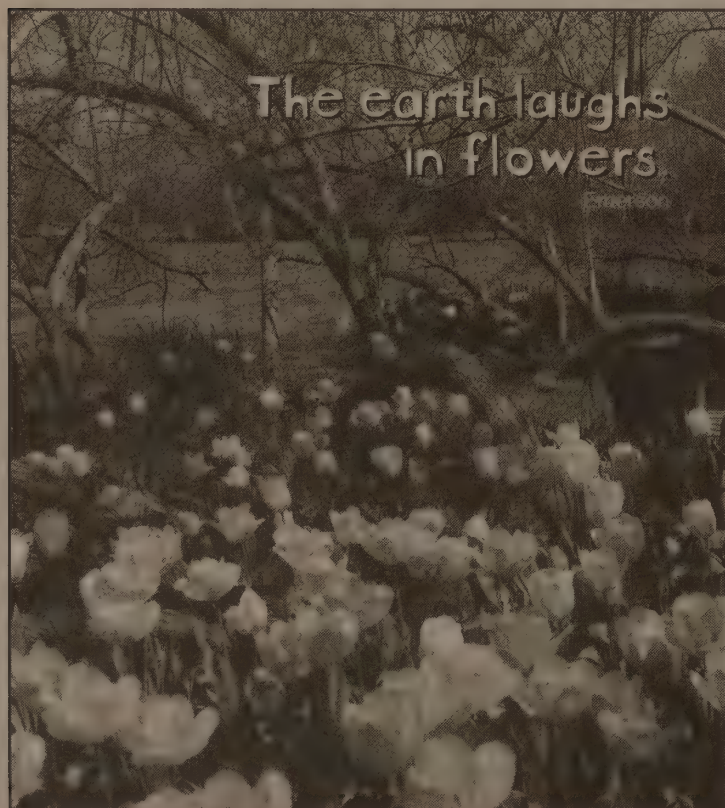

Donna Gutkin spends much of her time reclaiming spoiled environments. She recently created an employee landscape for the New York Times' printing facility built on an abandoned refuse dump. The project has transformed discarded land into a landscape where employees relax in a "crossword puzzle" garden that links internal and external environments. The transformation has also become a point of interest for motorists traveling along the adjacent expressway.

For homeowners, there is a similar interest to integrate external landscapes with internal spaces. The use of shrubs, arbors, and privacy walls are in demand. Given the pressures of day-to-day life and the tense world situation, people now seek ways to extend their ability to relax and entertain in spaces landscaped for these purposes. Linda Nelson says she gets requests to create environments that inspire exploration and discovery, that remove people from the cares of day-to-day issues, and provide landscapes filled with colors and textures. Charlie Marder feels the approach has not varied, but the motives are different, e.g., years ago people used privacy screening so they could nude sunbathe; today they want privacy to get away from daily pressures.

There is also a trend to create "edible landscapes," integrating food plants with flowers. The use of container tomatoes is already a mainstay for many on the East End (they also taste better than tomatoes from the grocery). Moreover, there has been a re-examination of fruit and nut plants for their ornamental characteristics and landscape value. Many trees and shrubs appropriate for edible landscaping are also good for wildlife, and there is increasing interest in plants that feed and shelter backyard wildlife.

The use of berry plants, and trees and shrubs with interesting bark and seed heads can add interest to the landscape four seasons of the year. The idea is to provide plants that bring a sense of calmness to the landscape – ones that offer colors and textures and provide forage for animals. Furthermore, the use of herbs and clovers in lawns produces a double landscape benefit. These plants add interest and fragrance; they also eliminate the pressure to produce a "golf course quality" lawn. Lawn herbs and clovers smell good, feel great under bare feet, add necessary soil nitrogen, and grow deep enough to enhance balance and increase aeration in the soil.

Perennials and ornamental grasses have grown more popular every year. In addition to being more carefree than annuals, there is a growing interest in using perennials to create special landscapes such as fragrance gardens, butterfly and bird gardens, meadows and low maintenance gardens, and shade and bog gardens. As Donna Gutkin pointed out, this is an area where landscape architects enjoy exercising their creativity and knowledge of perennial plants.

Nursery retailers are also offering many more cool-weather annuals and perennials that emerge in late winter or can be planted for fall color. The use of early-emerging bulbs is now being complimented with cool season biennials and perennials – wintering over from the fall and blooming early in the spring.

Coupled with these interests is a focus on the use of native plants (or their hybrids) in landscaping. Native plants require fewer pesticides and less irrigation to be successful. They also counteract the approach to gardening, from a few years ago, that overused colors and textures. Use of native plants with a single, outstanding color creates a greater sense of elegance. It also helps to counteract some of the over-watering now occurring on the East End from irrigation systems. Charlie Marder was quick to point out that irrigation systems have had a net negative effect because they sometimes activate dormant fungi and viruses that occur in the soil. He pointed out, for example, a recent problem with East End rhododendrons that are having a dieback because of over-watering and the attack of some of these agents.

In terms of the overall landscape, it is important to consider the entire space as an outdoor room, not simply a place to place a bush or to plant a pansy. Linda Nelson likes the idea of meandering paths and clumps of interest. Just as you would invest in good furniture in the hope that quality will sustain through the years, the same is true with objects in the landscape. Creating the right focal points is an important aspect of landscaping. Donna Gutkin always seeks to identify a naturally occurring plant or obstacle in the garden around which to build the landscape design. Charlie Marder likes the use of mature trees to create a garden focal point. And Linda Nelson creates broad, grouping of one kind of plant to create important effects.

The use of mature trees, shrubs, and perennials as the backbone for the design can provide a sense of stability and solidity. Far from the idea of "instant gardening," expensive, mature trees suggest a stability that can help hold the landscape together. It also provides a reference point against which gardeners can accessorize the landscape to reflect individual preference and personality.

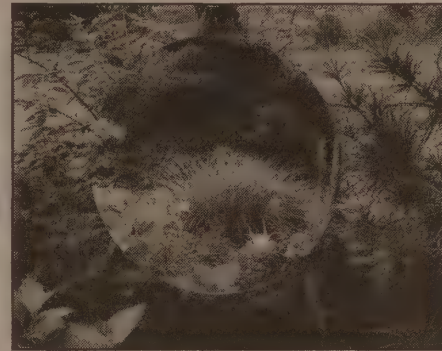

East End gardeners will continue to break some rules to create landscape interest. Using tropical plants as annuals will continue. And homeowners no longer want to wait for a "frost free" landscape to enjoy the results. More and more landscapes are seeking to extend colors and textures throughout the seasons. It only takes a walk through Marders to confirm the growing number of southern magnolias and monkey puzzle trees.

All in all, this is an exciting time for landscaping – a time to rethink the health of the environment and how the use of native plants can support that health. It is also a time to reconsider how nature can help to create environments that extend our ability to live outdoors on a continuing basis.

Whoopsie Daisy

This April has lived up to its reputation of soggy skies, but in return for our endurance of clouds, we will begin to see the perfect white petals of daisies sprouting from our well-watered green lawns. What better sign of springtime than a flower that signifies innocence, simplicity, and cheerfulness? What could possibly match the joy of spring's first warm rays of sunshine besides the yellow face of a perfectly framed daisy? When I look into the innocent, open face of a daisy, I can't help but smile at the fact that something so perfect springs from the ground after a winter that seemed to have frozen the earth to the core. For me, daisies are synonymous with springtime and all that implies: birth, romance, energy, life, and the beginning. Daisies have had significance in culture, literature, and psychology for centuries.

Back in the era of knights and ladies, daisies had significance in courtship. Suitors would wear daisies when they were courting ladies, and the waiting ladies would incorporate them into designs on mementos. After a proposal, betrothed girls would traditionally wear daisy garlands on their heads as a sign of their answer. According to Celtic legend, the spirits of children who died at birth lived in daisies. It was said that God scattered these beautiful flowers across the earth to comfort grieving parents.

Because of their symbolic significance, daisies have proven worthy subjects of literature throughout the centuries. Though daisies have been popular in the works of Chaucer, Shakespeare, and Keats, it was Goethe who immortalized them in Faust. Marguerite wanted to know whether the object of her affection, Faust, loved her, and she sat plucking the petals of a daisy and repeating the legendary phrase "He loves me, he loves me not." Marguerite's passive discovery tactic has been applied by every romantic young girl at some point or another.

Tiny daisy-like flowers seem to appear in springtime with no effort, like dew on the grass. Some people call these angelic creatures weeds, but this is far too negative a connotation for something so sweet and pretty. Calling tiny daisies "weeds" is like calling butterflies pests.

Then there are the daisies that take effort, that smile up at you with their round flower faces from the beds that you've tended. Biennial daisies can be planted in spring or autumn, and hardy annuals should be planted in April or May. So if you want daisies in your garden, now is the time. Here's a step-by-step guide to planting a healthy garden of daisies.

Preparation:

- If the seeds have a hard coating, shake in a jar with coarse sand and let the seeds soak overnight in tepid water.
- Rake soil to even surface, add peat or compost. Do not use fertilizer.
- Make drills 6-12 inches apart about three times the depth of the seed.
- Water soil.
- Mix small seeds with silver sand.

Sowing:

- Sow seeds thinly
- Cover with soil and firm
- Cover area with wires and twigs to deter birds.

Germination:

- Some germinate within days, but others may take weeks.

Thinning Out:

- When seedlings are big enough to handle, thin them out, leaving one seedling every 2 inches.
- A week later, thin out again, leaving seedlings 4 inches apart

Now all you need is the natural ripening of springtime, the warming of the earth and the awakening of buds, and you will have a garden of daisies smiling up at you in no time!

East Meets West In Home Fashion

If you've noticed, Eastern-inspired accent pieces – from luxurious velvet pillows with tassels to embroidered hand towels to intricate carved chairs – can update a room quickly by adding a sophisticated sense of style. East meets West in home design by adding a few well-placed pieces that can transform an ordinary room into an exotic oasis. The end result is a soft yet modern look.

As home entertaining continues to be popular, the challenge lies in creating unique, attractive focal points – without spending a fortune. You can bring the Eastern influence into your home by keeping in mind that less is more in terms of current design trends. Finding that 'perfect piece' can be really fun, almost a treasure hunt. You should look for unique, one-of-a-kind items. Here are some interesting room-by-room ideas from your local T.J. Maxx stores.

The Kitchen: Asian Culinary Delights

The foods of the East are lauded as the ultimate in healthy gourmet options. Entertain with soothing herbal and green teas served in delicate teapots and cup sets, or serve delicious delicacies such as sushi on squared white lacquer plates with chopsticks using bamboo place-mats to reinforce the Asian theme.

The Powder Room: Unique Accents

Add Eastern ambience to any powder room with such simple additions as gorgeous embroidered hand towels. Display towels on a decorative bamboo rack and you have successfully merged form and function. Also indulge in votives, candle holders and unique containers that are perfect for cotton balls or little soaps. An unusual side table can surprise and delight. These little unexpected touches enhance the overall design scheme.

Living Room Drama

You can easily update a classic room by adding just a few Eastern-inspired items. Consider a stunning carved chair ($199), draped with a sari throw and velvet pillows. Combine a variety of pillow shapes for the ultimate in visual appeal – triangle, round, rectangular. A handsome chest ($149.99) doubles as a cocktail table or corner of the room accent. Color schemes should also be a priority; burgundy/gold, red/gold, black/red and green/ivory all work to create a depth of richness. Colorful wall prints act as a visual focal point – a subtle yet effective way to reinforce elements.

Study/Family Room: Small Spaces With Big Ideas

Accent pieces are especially important when decorating small spaces. Bring home the mystique of the Orient with chests in rattan or bamboo, which make terrific "conversation" pieces, yet function perfectly as side tables. Top with a variety of items that provide color, texture and design: silk plants, an ornamental lamp with a carved statuette, a ceramic bowl, Zen books and other decorative accessories. "Strive for a simple, uncluttered look," suggests T.J. Maxx's home fashion spokesperson Laura McDowell. "The space should feel welcoming and relaxed – a special haven within your home."

Far East Outdoor Décor

Use a little bit of teak wood to influence your outdoor patio or terrace such as a Tiki bar in the corner of your yard, or try a Buddha made of lava stone at the entrance to give your outdoors that Eastern influence.

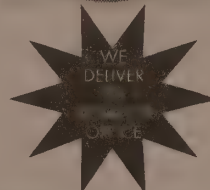

At Taman Batu (which means garden stone) on County Road 39 in Southampton you will get the feel of East meets West. There is quite a selection of unique and exotic outdoor pieces that will probably fit perfectly in your outdoor living space.

For just a little bite out of your budget, you can create a place in your home with a little touch of the Far East.

Mural Designs and Faux Finishes

When planning a mural or faux finishing project, the first thing you need to decide on is the color scheme and design. Thumb through a few magazines to come up with a theme or create one on your own. It's a great way to get ideas that will help you create your own unique style:

Stencils work wonders, allowing you to sketch or trace an outline to paint in. Available in every pattern imaginable, from floral designs to geometric shapes and everything in between, stencils are easy to use, provided you have a steady hand. You can create a mural effect by layering a variety of hand-painted selections such as an assortment of colorful flowers to create a bouquet or garden.

Proper tools are necessary. Special brushes are used specifically for faux painting and wall murals. Large, softer brushes are best to use for colorwashing, one of the most popular paint effects that entails a sweeping, random and crisscrossed stroke technique. Special sponges are used for sponging areas and steel wool can be used to accomplish a distressed look. The wall acts as your open canvas, allowing you to add layers that create depth and texture to a painting. Make sure that your wall is clean and free of any cracks or holes by patching and then smoothing rough surfaces with sandpaper. Paint the surface with a primer followed by the proper base coat. For a water-based paint, use low luster latex. Acrylic, tempera, or oil paint may also be used. Allow the wall to dry overnight before you begin the final painting.

To simulate a natural, aged appearance or antique patina, use paint glazes, beeswax, hammers and sandpaper. With these, you can create a distressed look. There are kits available at art supply stores and home decorating stores that make it easy to accomplish this look.

The style, subject matter or setting of the mural can change the mood of a room by creating a fun, romantic or angelic theme. By making a mural multi-dimensional, you will create a realistic look for your painting, as long as you are careful to include only the objects that thematically fit the setting, and this will also make even a small space appear impressive. Children's rooms can be lots of fun. Whether you want to re-create a favorite cartoon character scene or bring the great outdoors into your child's room, a mural will create a cheery and uplifting environment. They can take you back in time or a step into the future.

I have also seen murals that allow the incorporation of both paintings and wooden cutouts. For example: create a beach scene with a basic painted background (the ocean and blue sunny sky), and add birds or sea shells that can be cut-outs made of wood or other materials, mounted to create a three-dimensional affect).

Gold leafing is another option that will add depth to your creation. This technique can be applied to plastic, paper, metal, plaster or wood. One of the key steps is to seal the leaf with gesso or another commercial acrylic sealer. If you forget this step, the surface will tarnish over time.

We've only touched on a few techniques. There are so many options to choose from when making a mural or stenciled wall. Murals will bring life to an empty room, and they don't need to be overpowering. There is an abundance of books, magazines and in-home kits that will help guide any budding Michelangelos through the process. The Essential Guide To Decorating by Vinny Lee is a great how-to book to reference. Every turn of the page will guide you visually step-by-step through your project. One notable tip from this guide suggests that when trying to cover a large area, it is easier to work with somebody else so that one person can apply the glaze while the other can soften the effect. This will help avoid joint marks. Masking tape is also essential, to block off hard-to-reach areas and curvy corners. There are so many styles and techniques to try and with the correct materials, preparation and time, the possibilities are endless.

Stones In Your Path

Homeowners looking to do something more creative with their hardscaping – patios, walkways, pool decks and driveways – are increasingly turning to a variety of methods that replicate the look of natural stone materials. They do so under the erroneous assumption that the natural materials they mimic are too costly to consider.

Thanks to the efforts of Karl Mangialardi, the "Stonehunter" and owner of Gothicstone Tile Gallery in suburban Philadelphia, you don't have to settle for man-made materials when you can have the real thing for very nearly the same cost. By partnering with a factory in Turkey that quarries, cuts and tumbles first quality travertine, they are able to offer beautiful tumbled travertine and marble pavers at a phenomenal price, only slightly higher than that of tumbled concrete pavers.

Beyond their affordability and beauty, the tumbled travertine Gothicstone Paver offers many advantages. First, because they do not have the metal content of bluestones, granite, slate and other similar materials, travertine pavers consistently remain cool under foot, even during the hottest days of summer. That is why these pavers are the materials of choice for pool installation contractors.

Without a doubt, the biggest advantage to the Gothicstone Paver is their incredible strength and durability. Tumbled travertine and marble pavers have been tested to the standards of the American Society of Testing and Materials (ASTM), the organization that establishes the benchmark standards used by the scientific community. They were found to withstand pressures exceeding 5,000 pounds per square inch. This is double the strength of your typical poured concrete slab and far stronger than concrete pavers. They also withstand our harsh winters, as they were tested and meet ASTM standards for freeze/thaw compatibility in northern climates.

These very same properties mean travertine pavers will not scuff, crack or degrade like man-made materials and they never need to be sealed or require any type of maintenance. Remember, this is the same material that the Coliseum in Rome is faced with, and that structure has survived for nearly 2000 years. "Some people have the notion that limestone is a soft material, but it is really amazingly strong," says Karl Mangialardi. "It is one of the most widely used building materials in the world."

When you are investing in this type of home improvement, you want to make sure that you get the best return on your money. The natural tumbled travertine Gothicstone Paver provides homeowners all that, and a natural elegance that just can't be outdone.

Offering one of the largest selections of travertine landscaping products in the region, including tile, pavers, columns, fountains, ballisters, steps, coping and all related architectural features, Gothicstone travels the world to find beautiful, unique and exotic tile lines and buys them direct, so that they can offer the most exquisite stone & tiles found anywhere – at below market prices.

Ki And The Triadic Principles Of The Garden

Inspired, perhaps, by Quentin Tarantino's epic Kill Bill, you have decided to film your own martial arts opus right in your backyard. Some of the most cost efficient changes you can make to your set, in this case your yard, are the installation of some Asian-inspired features in your garden.

Groups of three are central to the Buddhist aesthetic principle. Sanzonseki-gumi is the name given to compositions recalling sculptures of the Buddhist Trinity. Although it's been said that aesthetic values generally originate in a religious sphere, these compositions are not significant because of their religious symbolism but are instead important due to their aesthetic composition. As religious values decline, the aesthetic develops and gains autonomy. It has also been suggested that the triad is an ancient archetype that was later adopted by a variety of religious iconographies. The triad theme in your garden can relate to many objects and be repeated again and again. Three large rocks can be arranged in descending size order to create a centerpiece and the other features arranged to follow accordingly.

In Japan, the use of three components goes from the garden all the way to flower arranging. It is wise to start from there and work your way up. The three basic components in this type of flower arrangement are "the branch of truth" (the tallest feature), "the accompanying branch" (slightly lower) and "the flowing one" (you guessed it: the shortest one). They are usually referred to as ten (heaven), chi (earth) and jin (man). Unless you insist on western icons, this trinity can be easily transposed into your garden. When you point and explain that there are ten, chi and jin, your guests can't help but smile and nod sagely even while they have no clue what you are talking about.

Once the triadic principles are grasped, it is a small leap to the actual garden. Map out the area to be landscaped on a sheet of paper in advance. Lay out the features in a precise manner on the paper to make sure that your design will be pleasing to you from all angles. One approach is to view your design as a microcosm of geographical features. For instance, it is common to view rocks and boulders as islands in bodies of water. You might want to borrow the dynamic of an actual geographic feature that interests you (be it the relation of Hawaiian islands or a pond on Noyac Road). Try to keep moving in powers of three around your islands in a deliberate manner, and see where it leads.

It is always helpful if you can fit actual water, which is essential to a Japanese garden, into the garden, in addition to any metaphorical water you might have envisioned. Water features are an element of garden design that the Japanese borrowed from China during the Heian period (794-1185).

Another element borrowed from China was the concept of geomancy, often known as feng-shui – literally wind-water. Sino-Japanese geomancy is a holistic design theory based on a view of the cosmos where man is seen as an integral part of nature. And really, isn't that what you are striving for in any garden? It refers, mainly, to when such high levels of design have been achieved that geographical land forms are in correlation with celestial ones. (i.e. that the moon and stars reflect off the pond the way you want them to when you want them to). The Chinese geomantic compass was often divided into three levels – again, heaven, earth and man.

Do you see a pattern developing? The less technical schools of thought refer to the theory of ki (often called configurative energy and used to describe the flow within a complex natural or man-made configuration), an intuitive approach, which is sort of indescribable. You might just say, "If it feels good, do it," but this takes years of practice and the training of a master. In the end you might call your garden Buddhist, Zen, Christian or Kung-Fu; it doesn't matter; you created it.

Skin deep with Samantha Altea

Stripped

It's been a long, hard winter and let's face it: if you're anything like me, you've been compelled to put on a little ritz just to get through it. A bit of primping here, some embellishments to your natural beauty there? Now don't go all shy, you know what I mean. Hands up if you occasionally use, for example, false eyelashes, if even for a special occasion? Or a hairpiece to add a little body and bounce? A fake ponytail on a dull day for some va-va-voom, perhaps? Are you blonde? Really blonde? Be honest. Or did you get your golden locks from a bottle? And what about those perfectly manicured nails? Do the words "acrylic tips" mean anything to you? And let's not forget those three little words that I, for one, have been sporting throughout the winter months - Push Up Bra. There's nothing to be ashamed of. A little beautifying with some trimmings and tricks of the trade to brighten winter days is empowering. But now that it's a little warmer out, how about getting rid of all the extra garb that can sometimes weigh you down? Lighten the load a little. I'm giving you permission. Get stripped of all that "stuff" and get ready for more relaxed, natural looking days at the beach and great outdoors.

If you want a simpler spring and summer, then nix the unnecessary appendages of winter and take my suggestions. They'll make you feel light as feather. But before you dismiss this week's column because you wouldn't be seen dead with a hair piece, and you're not bragging, but you don't need any pushing or padding in the brassiere department thank-you very much, then wait. There are other ways to get stripped this spring and summer, and I'm not talking about skinny-dipping.

Go back to your roots. Say goodbye to any false hair pieces you may have been attached to this winter; they don't mix well with salt water anyway and, if you dare, take the lead of many a celeb, who, of late, seem to be reverting back to their natural color. Give your colorist the boot. Embrace your natural hair, whether it's straight or curly, blonde or brown. One day at the beach and you'll be glad you did. For curly hair, try Frederick Fekkai's Luscious Curls, $18.50, which helps to leave hair frizz-free and bring out your natural bounce. Or comb hair back for a simple slick look, with Phytoplage Sun Protection Oil, for all hair types. It moisturizes and protects hair from sun, salt water and chlorine. Let the sun lighten your hair a tad naturally, or spritz your mane with Korres Natural products' $16 Red Vine Year Round Hair Sun Protection, perfect for pre- and post-swimming.

Burn your Wonderbra. Well, that's a bit radical, especially if, like me, you need a bit of a boost in your bathing suit. But when you're not at the beach, you might want to think about going natural, if you feel you can. Or try wearing a comfortable sports bra under a T, instead of something more constricting. Even looking for tops with built-in bras can simplify your summer.

Instead of acrylic nails this year, go natural and try using a cuticle quencher, like Bloom $15 Cuticle Quencher, that encourages strong, healthy, natural nails and cuticles. Or just pop on a coat of Sephora's $12 Nail Hardener for a clear, subtle shine. Paul and Joe Nail Colors, $12, in vibrant tints, are a fun alternative, too. Also try taking Phyto $45 Phytophanere Dietary Supplement to help maintain healthy hair & nails.

Instead of using lipsticks and liners, just apply a little gloss for a lighter look and feel. And for luscious lashes without thick heavy mascara, use Talika, Paris Liposils $35 Eyelash Lipocils. It's guaranteed to stimulate the growth of lashes, as it conditions and beautifies existing ones.

If you were paying attention to Barbara Jo's column last week, by now you will have perfected the art of self-tanning. Reduce the amount of products you'd normally put on your face with a hint of color. Self-tanners can substitute for a face base and powder, or try a little tinted moisturizer and you're good to go.

Tickle your toes and strip yourself of closed-in shoes, socks and stockings. Again, self-tanning helps us to make this stripping more palatable in early spring before we've gotten our summer color. Make sure to remove all hair to feel completely lighter than light. Gentlemen, shed that back hair you've been hiding all winter at a salon, or try Nair for Men depilatory, or Epil Stop and Spray, if you can get a helping hand. Boys, go for a shorter hair cut during the warmer months, to ease your mood, while ladies lighten their leg load (and the rest) with Veet depilatory products for use at home.

Simplify your life this season and on, because the lighter you are, the lighter you'll feel. Get stripping now!

"Let Me Tell You How I Improved My Looks Naturally"

"My eyes were getting smaller and my eyelids were drooping. After my full face Thermage treatment, I feel like I had a real face lift without the surgery. I was thrilled to see the immediate results and my boyfriend was able to notice an amazing difference in less than 24 hours."

The Latest Images At Southampton Hospital

I'm looking at a baby's face. I can see that she is glancing to one side as if something's caught her attention. Her mouth is slightly open, giving her what appears to be a thoughtful expression. There is a crinkle in her nose and there are puffs and creases in her cheeks. The tiny fingers of one hand rest on the side of her little face. I see every line in the bend of her knuckles. It is amazing. She is 37 weeks old and not yet born. Still, I am able to look right at her. I saw these images on the very latest 3-D ultrasound equipment while on a recent tour through Southampton Hospital's new imaging department. Ultrasound machines have been around for a long time, it's true, but three-dimensional pictures such as these have far more clarity and detail than the ones we once knew. They truly appear to be the real thing. Now, it is actually possible to know what a baby looks like before it is born!

The new ultrasound equipment is just the beginning of what is to come in the area of maternity for the hospital. In May, they will announce plans to either expand or build a state-of-the-art obstetrics and gynecology unit that will be equipped with all the latest in obstetric technology. Some of the proposed ideas include private rooms for mothers and a high-risk neonatal unit.

Also in imaging, I was shown something called a 16-slice CT scanner. Michael Telgasi, head of that department, explained the machine to me, and then we stepped into one of the monitoring rooms set behind a glass wall. I watched as a person's body passed through this huge circular device on a conveyor. Everything about this room and the machine, was new, clean and streamlined. In the technicians room, where I watched from, there were four computer screens showing every angle of each picture that was being taken and at the same time, monitoring live all of the vitals signs. I could see inside the person's body; every organ was visible. The slices, I began to understand, are the speeds in which the images are taken. The more rapid the speed, the higher the resolution. The pictures were complete in just a few seconds. "Not too long ago," Telgasi said, "this same process took about 8 minutes and was often disturbed and made unclear by the patient's movement. This made diagnosis difficult at best, and readings were often useless." I watched as the detailed images simultaneously appeared on the screens. The technician pointed out a clogged artery in the heart, clear as day. Even I could plainly see the problem.

Dr. David Kirshy, President of Physicians at Southampton, explained the benefits of the latest in MRI. Unlike the claustrophobic tunnels in the past, these MRI units are wide open and purposely set in front of windows to prevent patients from feeling restricted. This new technology allows doctors to view detailed pictures of the tendons, muscles and joints. Like the scanner, it is faster and more precise than its predecessor. It is most often used to see potential problems in the brain or spine because of its ability to display fine detail. Pictures can be seen from three views: frontal, back, and top, so that almost nothing goes undetected. This kind of technology can be life-saving when a decision or concise diagnosis must be made in seconds.

Some of this new technology in imaging can even eliminate surgery in many cases by the use of a procedure called Angiography. Now this is where it gets truly remarkable! Some of this technology is straight out of Jules Verne. This machine can take a virtual tour through the human body. Doctors can map a path through the veins and travel to problem areas to insert devices or make repairs, and they watch on monitors as they maneuver through the body. The same procedures that once required major surgery now can be done with an incision the size of a pencil tip. A friend of mine had this type of procedure done on his heart last fall to repair a leaking valve.

Just a few years back he would have had to have open heart surgery. Instead, the surgeon used a tiny incision and sent a small device in to repair the valve. He is as good as new.

Technologies such as these lessen the need for hospital stays and more invasive surgeries. Long term, they save both the hospital and the patient time and money and lower the rate of risk and complication. It was truly mind-boggling to have seen this extraordinary technology as it happened. Southampton Hospital is the only hospital on Eastern Long Island that has these machines. Fundraising for the new obstetric and gynecology center will soon be underway. It is expected to cost approximately 5 million dollars.

LARISA BOND AT VISCAYA

Gillian Hearst, Annie Churchill, and Marc Bouwer hosted the 007 birthday celebration for Wilhelmina Supermodel Larisa Bond, the face of Guess and model for Victoria's Secret. The black beaded see-through dress designed by Marc Bouwer, told the tale of glamour and beauty revealed by the hot lights. Larisa's new $100,000 6-karat diamond ring from Kaufmann de Suisse did not escape notice as she hugged her boyfriend, entrepreneur Robert Watman. Guests squirted Veuve Cliquot from golden guns, created by master event designer, Remco.

CIRCUS COMES TO TOWN

A reception for the creative talent behind a new show at Tulla Booth in Sag Harbor brought out appreciative Hamptonites last Saturday. Carnivals are a sure harbinger of spring, bringing us the thrill and fantasy of the rides, sideshows and the Big Top. The photographers in this exhibit are all attracted to the magic of the Carnival and the sideshows' performances, as well as the behind the scenes spirit and lifestyle of the people who perform and chose to live in trailers to bring entertainment throughout the countryside.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Recent Transfers:

The Joel Leff house on 153 Great Plains Road in Southampton listed for 11.9 million dollars was just sold by Brown Harris Stevens, formerly Dunemere in Southampton. The house, a 1910 shingle structure consists of 11 bedrooms, 9 baths, has 4 fire-a pool, pool house, and a guest carriage house and tennis court. Andrea Ackerman, broker at Brown Harris Stevens, who specializes in the luxury market, says they have many high profile, politically connected clients frequenting her office of late.

The Southampton Town Board has approved the purchase of 11 beach acres in Westhampton Beach. The one million dollars to buy the land will be provided by the Community Preservation Fund. The bay front parcel is on Dune Road across from the Dune Deck Hotel. The town hopes to build a catwalk along the shore line there.

In Amagansett, Amagansett Square, a small group of specialty shops in the center of town has recently changed hands. The sale went privately and the new owner has all 8 shops doing business as usual.

On the Market:

A piece of North Fork history. The Brown - Dean House c. 1760 in East Marion is one of the oldest farmhouses on the North Fork and has just recently come on the market. The home has been renovated and restored three different times in its over 200 year history. It was constructed in the half-house style typical to Southold town during the Revolutionary War. Original period features such as its native stone foundation, wainscoting crafted in the 1800s and 6"x6" chestnut joists make this house special. Also on the property are a greenhouse, lofted barn and pool. The house is being offered by Agawam Albertson in Southold at $500,000.

On Shelter Island, Billy Joel will be "moving out" up for sale at 4.9 million. The home, renovated by

Billy Joel

Joel, has 4 bedrooms, 4 baths, a wine-cellar, pool, hot tub, private beach and dock. His boat, a 65 footer can also be made part of the deal for an additional 1.35 million. It is listed with Allan M Schneider Associates in Sag Harbor.

Martha Stewart still owns both her homes in East Hampton. While Martha's home on Georgia Close is currently on the market, her Lily Pond Lane house remains status quo for now.

For sale on Georgica Pond is a

12,000 sq.-ft. 80s classic contemporary on two acres. What makes this home unique is that it was built very close to, and to the contour of, the shoreline. There is a water view from every room. Today, regulation would keep it 150' from the shore. Valued at $12 million, it is listed with Tina S Fredericks Realty in East Hampton. 631-324-4418

You can still hide out in Montauk in this very secluded 2 bedroom cottage on .63 acres built back in the 1940s. It is like buying a piece of nature itself. This is so far out of the way no one will find you. It backs 190 acres of undisturbed and preserved land that faces the Block Island Sound. $2.7 million buys the house, cottage and views. There is little, if not nothing like it left in Montauk. It is held exclusively with Atlantic East Realty in Montauk. 631 668 6565.

Rentals:

Summer rentals are going strong. Brown Harris Stevens in Southampton reported that they have rented many homes this season in the range of $50,000.00 to $200,000.

The Numbers:

Area realtors agree that both sales and rentals are way up. The Corcoran Group in East Hampton, formerly Dayton Halstead, who tallied $133 million dollars in sales last year, says that sales are even stronger this year. Diane Saatchi, Vice President says they have had a phenomenal first quarter. Although less is out there on the market right now, the total sales dollars are higher. It is the high end that is selling and property values continue to rise. On the North Fork there has been a 43% rise in sales in the past year, where Hampton transplants are spilling onto the North Fork, seeking its peace and tranquility. Available land is scarce. Montauk realtors have reported buyers purchasing homes for the land alone; knocking down existing homes and building new.

Changes:

While one moratorium is lifted in Bridgehampton, another in North Haven is put in place. This week the moratorium will be lifted that prevented the building of the Barnes and Noble and other possible chains, on the 13 acres directly across from Bridgehampton Commons. Southampton Town's goal is to change the zoning in order to prevent the chain from building. In North Haven, the Village board has halted any building in the Village in order to take time to revamp their Village building codes. The Red Horse Market in East Hampton on Montauk Highway is planning to expand its parking by 20 spaces. The project is pending approvals.

Police Blotter

A graffiti artist with a penchant for blue and an attraction to street signs vandalized several locations in Sag Harbor with spray paint. The stop sign at Havens Beach, a historic sign on Main Street and a Harbor Close Condominium sign on Bridge Street were hit. Also marked was an abandoned car in the St. Andrew's Catholic Church parking lot.

Slaphappy BB shooter caused an estimated $225 in damages after shooting at two windows on East Street in Flanders, according to Southampton police.

Take the "I" out of lover and it's over. Someone left a message in lipstick on the window of a car left overnight in Herb's parking lot in Montauk. The perp also deflated three tires perhaps proving hope is the last thing to die...

Crack cabbie exposed in yearlong police investigation. It appears a Flanders man was using his taxicab for double duty. According to Southampton Town Police Department's Street Crime Unit, a driver for Riverhead Town Taxi was using a cab to distribute crack cocaine. The accused dealer, arrested late last year, pleaded guilty to drug-related charges and was sentenced on March 5 to 3-6 years in the big house.

"Get your rocks off somewhere else," Southampton Village Police Detective Lieutenant Howard Lewis told reporters when referring to vandals who tipped over the granite grave-stones at one the East End's oldest cemeteries. Sometime last week, several of the centuries-old granite markers in the North End Cemetery, the second-oldest in Southampton Village and one of the oldest on Long Island, fell prey to hooligans.

Now you see it, now you don't - a woman's wallet did a disappearing act in the King Kullen supermarket at the Bridgehampton Commons. Breaking a prime shopping cart rule, a Sag Harbor woman turned her back in the grocery store leaving her purse unattended and apparently providing ample opportunity for thievery. When she turned back around her wallet was gone.

Where there's smoke...there's fire. The interior of a Sagaponack resident's flatbed truck was set on fire while parked on Merchants path outside a storage facility. And in Springs, the owner of a camper that was parked next to his house found a burned hole in the bed; he also discovered a pair of two-way radios missing and a damaged window shade.

What's yours is part mine, too. Was this what the North Fork Bank employee was thinking when she allegedly forged documents authorizing the transfer of money from customer's accounts into her own personal account? Well, an internal investigation at the bank's Mattituck Operations Center, where she worked, determined over $5,000 was missing from several accounts. Arrested on charges of forgery and third degree grand larceny, the woman was arraigned on April 2.

HISTORICAL FICTION

Dear Dan,

Thank you for sharing your knowledge of local historic buildings in a recent feature. It was fascinating to read about the rich history of these unique structures.

I write and produce original plays for historic sites. It is my great pleasure to have the opportunity to teach history through live theatre to a wide audience. Right now I am working on a Civil War era play with The Southampton Historical Museum.

Please let Dan's Papers readers know that The SHM is located in The Rogers Mansion at 17 Meeting House Lane. Guided tours of the collections are offered and the SHM has a sizeable archive accessible by appointment for research. Plus, the

QUOGUE, SOUTH OF QUOGUE STREET TO BE BUILT

Noted area architect has designed this shingled masterpiece in the style of old Quogue's summer cottages. Situated just steps from the canal, this custom home is within walking distance of the main street but far enough away to offer the quietude of the country. Soon to be constructed, the residence will be impeccably appointed and replete with thoughtful details worthy of its designer and builder. The grand central foyer leads to a custom paneled library/den and an impressive living room with fireplace. The formal dining room has easy access to a specially designed kitchen complete with professional appliances, stone flooring and granite counter tops. Extensive decking surrounds the gunite swimming pool. An oversized master bedroom suite will feature a dressing room, turreted sitting room and exterior sun deck. 4 additional bedrooms, playroom/media room and 3 full bathrooms fill the 2nd floor. The residence will provide the discriminating buyer with the lifestyle only Quogue Village can offer. Start now to plan your home at a pre-construction price of $3,500,000.

Every musician, every singer, every dancer and actor, whether performing solo or ensemble, is to be individually thanked. Thanked for dreaming of moments when they can stand before you to entertain, enlighten, and amuse. Thanked for their time sacrificed to hone their skills. Thanked for seeking the arts as their form of expression.

We're all better for their efforts. James V. Zizzi understands labors of love, and his homes stand before you as testament. Which is why James V. Zizzi Contracting is a proud supporter of the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center.
